COUNTY ROAD IS INCLUDED IN LIST PROJECTS

Robersonville-Stokes Highway May Be Improved In Near Future

Robersonville, N. C., August 6.—The road leading from Robersonville to Stokes has been included in the list of projects that will be handled under the Federal road building program, according to information received here this week. Just when work will be started on the project and the type of road that will be built could not be learned. It is understood, however, that new bridges will be built and the road straightened and widened. Whether gravel or asphalt will be used or whether the road will be paved will be decided later, it was learned. The new route will shorten the distance from Robersonville to Greenville by about five miles, the present route via Bethel being 23 miles. Robersonville people generally were more anxious to have the route from here to Spring Green improved first, as that route handles about twice as much traffic as the road from here to Greenville cares for, and the route from here to Spring Green, via Gold Point, is much harder to maintain.

FARM AND HOME WEEK SUCCESS

Those attending the 31st State Farmers' and Farm Women's Convention held at State College last week had the opportunity of hearing some of the nation's agricultural leaders in addition to taking part in discussions conducted by their own folks from the farms of North Carolina.

Approximately 1,250 persons registered for the convention at the College headquarters with an additional number filling local hotels in Raleigh. County agents, vocational teachers, and grange lecturers were housed at Meredith College. At the general evening sessions from 3,000 to 4,000 were in attendance. During the day, the delegates scattered over the campus to attend various sectional gatherings.

Some time was devoted to recreation. Each evening after supper, there was community singing and following the prepared program games and dances were held on Riddick Field.

"The two officers of the convention, L. H. McKay, of Hendersonville, and Mrs. Dewey Bennett, of Hanes, conducted the program in an admirable way," declared Dean I. O. Schaub.

Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace was the principal speaker on the program, flying to Raleigh by plane to address the opening session on Monday evening, June 24. C. A. Cobb, cotton chief, and others of the administration, were present. Banquets and business meetings of the ten farm organizations meeting at the college were held during the week. In the opinion of college officials, the convention this year was one of the best in the 31 years the organized farmers of the state have met at their agricultural college.
