Fall in Line and March On

What must be done to restore prosperity? There is nothing else to do but fall in line and march on, since the program means for every man to do his part.

We still find a few folks that propose to do as they please, and follow their own methods in business without permitting the government to even suggest what they shall do or how and when they shall do it.

Well, it must be a fine thing to feel big and independent, yet in every measurement ever taken in this country it has been found that the Government is bigger than any man—so the best thing in sight now is to catch step and march on.

So far as we know, there is no other business that does not expect to profit by the Government's program. The farmer expects to get more for his crops; the merchant expects more for his goods; and it certainly looks like it will be good for us all. And, if so, we all owe it to our country, our neighbors, and ourselves to do all we can to promote the cause.

Then, too, we must follow on, whether we want to or not. Every business in this country will very soon be forced to participate in the recovery movement or close up. No business will be allowed to select its hours and fix its pay in competition with those who are keeping in line with the Government regulations.

This is the day that the Government is out to protect the weak man and we all may as well march together, and we will all be happier and safer.

Would Be Great Achievement

The headlines in the newspapers say a Federal board plans to end war between capital and labor. If they succeed in such an undertaking, it will be the greatest national achievement in all history, ending what is, by all odds, the most destructive of all wars, one which is, in the main, the foundation of almost all wars between nations.

Capital is afraid to go to sleep at night without a big navy and a strong army. It seems to have some kind of a conscience that perhaps might be best described as a gnawing guilt, which disturbs them, and making them far more anxious to have an army to protect their money than labor is to have an army to protect their bodies.

When labor and capital each pull fair with the other and are willing to trust each other, then good times will come to stay and we will feel as if we are living in a new world.

Luke Lea's New Venture

Colonel Luke Lea, of robbery fame and also famed for his ability to evade the law and whip the courts, expects to launch a new newspaper, "The Nashville Free Press," in the near future.

The famous Colonel has already repealed and nullified the law against stealing.

A Commendable Step

Duke University seems to have put a crimp in the privileges of the rich scions of the country who enter her gates. Not only do they deny them the privilege of owning or taking automobiles on the college grounds, but they deny them the right to drive automobiles while they are attending school there.

This action will enable insurance companies to write policies on the lives and limbs of women and children of the section. The greatest good it will do, however, is to ease the minds of mothers who know how wild boys are with automobiles.

It is a fine thing and really ought to go up to the higher classmen as well as freshmen.

The Other Fellows' Business

There are a few things one picks up in passing through life that we can hardly understand. For instance, laymen know more about law than lawyers, merchants know more about farming than farmers, farmers know more about merchandising than merchants, quacks know more about anatomy and medicine than doctors, sinners know more about morality and Christianity than preachers do.

It may be that we know more about the other fellow's business than we do our own, after all. It seems to be true that if you don't know your own job, just ask anybody and they can tell you plenty.

"Breaking a Stranglehold"

The trouble in Cuba is principally caused by the fact that they have New York governing their own people and because the Government at Washington has permitted New York money dictatorship there.

Under the heading, "Breaking a Stranglehold," the Daily News, of Philadelphia, says editorially:

"Evidently the Wall Street group that has been trying to keep the people of Cuba under its thumb is becoming a bit wary and is either afraid of the revolution that is bound to come or else the American government has finally stepped in quietly and rapped some of these Wall Street knuckles.

For months Cuba has been in the grip of a tyranny and under the oppression of a political group which is the tool of certain American banking interests who would squeeze the lifeblood out of the Cuban people if necessary. These interests have been the backbone of the present regime in Cuba, headed by President Machado, and have sought to use the threat of American intervention as a curb to hold the Cuban people from rebelling.

It is an old story of our methods used in Central America, and even in Mexico, where certain of our interests have always struggled to keep in power administrations or tyrants who gave them rich concessions in exchange for graft.

"Small wonder the Latin brothers toward the south mistrust us. The unfortunate part of it is they blame all American for the game the few are playing.

"However, the situation in Cuba seems to have gotten too hot, and it looks as if the Cuban people may also be coming into a new deal.

How Quickly We Forget

How quickly things can be forgotten. We have almost forgotten about that Jap-China war that raged so last year, when Japan tried to steal all China. In fact, we are beginning to forget the great World War. We are no longer mad with Germany, and all of us admit war doesn't pay and that it is a bad thing for both the ones who get killed and those who do not. All suffer. Yet we forget and as soon as the world gets out of one fight, it immediately starts getting ready for another one.

So now we are rushing to spend about two hundred and fifty millions for the construction of 21 new warships. If the world would spend just half as much for peace as it does for war, we would have twice as much peace and half as much war as we do have.

Regular Inspection Needed

The health and beauty of a town can be very greatly improved by keeping weeds and grass from growing on vacant lots. Mud puddles breed mosquitoes, and may cause diseases such as ground itch.

An inspection tour, covering every section of the town should be made at regular intervals, with a view of getting everybody to make their premises look good and be safe. The laws of the town require this.

Who Will Pay the Cost?

The Hon. Pete Murphy, head of the wet parade of North Carolina, is quoted by newspapers as saying that you can not enforce laws against those who do not want them enforced, and he then cites the case of Adam and Eve, who disobeyed the law of God, which said they should not eat the fruit of the tree in the midst of the garden.

Now, Mr. Pete did not tell us whether the law was a bad law or a good law. Perhaps he doesn't care.

The important thing for Pete to tell us is just why Adam and Eve disobeyed the law. Let him explain that it was a devil that beguiled them and induced them to break the good law that God had made. And, after all, is not Mr. Pete taking the position of the snake, or serpent, and going to the innocent, thoughtless folks and telling them that liquor is a fine thing, "It surely will not kill you," and by his words and deeds is he not doing all he can to induce men, women and children to hate and violate a good law and endanger their lives and happiness in every way?

When Satan beguiled Adam and Eve, there were certain records made against the devil in the courts above. Now, since Mr. Murphy is citing that case as a precedent to violate and abolish laws that work for the good of human beings, we wonder what the record will show in this case.

We think Mr. Murphy was unfortunate in using the Adam and Eve illustration, where in the presence of a good law, three personages were present, Adam, Eve, and Satan, and Satan won. Mr. Murphy may win—who will pay the cost?

win—but at what price to humanity is the question?

An Unfortunate Proposal

News and Observer.

From Washington the report comes that there is a strong movement in the American Legion which aims at changing the constitution of that veterans' organization at its approaching Chicago meeting to permit the participation of the Legion openly and actively in national politics with a view to "electing friends and defeating enemies."

Friends of the Legion will devoutly hope that such a movement will not make much headway. The organizers of the Legion, in definitely safeguarding it from the dangers of becoming a political organization, followed the wisest course. Political activity would keep the Legion in a constant turmoil if it did not split it wide open. And once it becomes a political organization it would lose the strength and dignity which it is entitled to as a purely patriotic body of comrades.
