Get Ready for School

About thirty million children will have the privilege of entering school with the next few weeks.

The schoolhouses are already built. The transportation equipment is ready for action. Books and clothing are now the biggest things confronting this great army of young people, the future masters of every business and profession in our whole country.

It is one big job to train this vast number of people in such elements of honesty, truth, diligence, soberness, virtue, and wisdom as will produce the best government and the greatest happiness for its people.

More of the Ten Commandments and less of the right and left fields and quarterbacks would make a great difference in the final outcome of our future citizenship. Another thing we need to teach is mathematics, a thing we seem to be leaving out, perhaps because it is hard.

In the science building at the "Century of Progress Exposition" is written "Mathematics is the basis of all science." Yet we fail to see much sign of mathematics in our modern school system. In our opinion, that is one point that needs to be strengthened.

Another troublesome thing in our schools is the book question. The publishers put books out on commission. They generally get in late, a few weeks after the schools start, and the schools have to run in a helter-skelter way for some time, with half the pupils doing without books.

The state would do a much better job if it would buy the books outright, sell them at cost, and save a lot of money; or, better still, furnish them free to all.

Another thing the schools need to do is have a program of more work and less play. By such a course we will raise better citizens and a generation that will be nearer self-supporting.

Why Discard Judgment?

The Nation's Business.

W. O'Neil, head of the General Tire and Rubber Company, recently expressed his conviction that industry is not entirely a young man's job. Experience and mature judgment have their place in the manufacture and distribution of the nation's commodities as well as youthful initiative, enterprise and energy, he believes.

"In this fast-moving age, there has developed a theory that men more than 40 should be thrown into the discard, but, in our organization, we have a number of men more than 60 who are doing real jobs," Mr. O'Neil says. "While we do not make a practice of hiring old men, we certainly have no age limit on keeping them."

"Bricks and mortar don't make a plant—neither do chemistry and engineering—it takes men to make a plant. Men must feel safe in their jobs, sure of their jobs." If the only future they could look forward to was that, when they reached a certain age, they would be thrown into the discard, they could not do their best work. We must recognize the capabilities and advantages of age and experience."

Industry is neither a young man's job nor an old man's job. Both have their places and each needs the other.

Disappointing Prices

The opening prices for tobacco on the Eastern Carolina markets have been very disappointing so far.

Good quality lugs have been reported at nearly every point, yet the average has been only about 10 to 11 cents. With very few piles going under 5 cents, it is evident that the better grades which dominate this year are going entirely too low.

Tobacco farmers will not be able to buy very much goods under the NRA prices unless there is a considerable rise in prices.

Slowing Up

We notice that the government is dropping some of its air mail service. We are indeed glad to hear it, because everything is going too fast already. It seems to be impossible to go fast enough to please this generation of folks, so why try, by spending everything we can get our hands on?

We just rush on—dissatisfying ourselves by trying to satisfy ourselves.

It just is not worth the price. Cut down and go slower. We will all like it better.

Your Responsibility

There are two great tragedies of fire. First is the fact that 80 per cent or more of all fires, large or small, are entirely unnecessary and could easily be prevented.

Second, in a great many fires, damage is much larger than it should be, because of failure of fire-fighting to handle the blaze quickly and efficiently.

The first problem is largely up to the individual. The community can pass good building codes and enforce inspections of property—but these will be successful to only a small degree without public interest and cooperation. Fires arising from misuse of heating plants, from the careless disposal of waste matter, from inferior wiring, cause damage to the extent of millions a year. Every one of these fires could be prevented if the property owner would go to the small trouble and expense necessary to assure safety.

Make no mistake—the prevention and quenching of fire is a matter that touches the lives and pocketbooks of us all. For many years America has led the world in this waste—an unenviable record. It is time for the influence of the citizen to be felt.

Are you, Mr. Citizen, going to be in any way responsible for your next local fire tragedy?

Stabilizing the Monetary System

The question of the value of the dollar is always agitating the public mind.

England had sufficient intelligence last year to know that a high-priced dollar was making every other price low. The United States caught the vision only a few months ago and brought down the price of the dollar and raised the price of a pound of cotton.

Now, the French people find the high-priced franc is hurting her business, and she will soon have to follow the United States and Great Britain.

Since the whole world is trading with the whole world, and most of the folks have learned too much to be easily robbed all the time, it is highly important to stabilize the basic prices of money the world over.

The Question of Profits

The question of profits is one of the stumbling blocks in business. Many people seem to cling to the idea that the 1919 profit basis—the year in which anybody could get rich in a few months—should prevail in these days. It just cannot be done.

The sooner we set our goal to take our whole lifetime to make our fortune the better it will be for us. It is about time for us to learn that overspeeding automobiles cause the most wrecks. And overspeeding our fortune building is also very dangerous. It causes disgrace, disappointment, and, too often, destruction.

Let us learn that a fair living, honestly acquired, is doing well, and is about as much as we need to expect.

The days of building up big fortunes overnight will not be with us again for some time.

To End Crime Is Impossible

All this talk of a national police force to end crime sounds rather foolish. If we should say "for the purpose of suppressing crime," it would have more color of the truth.

When we recall that there was a murder in the first family, we may as well acknowledge the power of the devil as the author of crime. So we need not expect safety from all this police talk to the extent of throwing away the smokehouse keys and letting every passing fellow hold our pocketbooks. The same devil is here.

The wet brigade has told us the country could not enforce its laws, and they were the very fellows who did not want the law enforced. Now they suggest the stopping of crime.

We may help things, but we cannot hope to eliminate crime as long as there is an element of selfishness among us.

The Only Way Out

Remember—the NRA route is the only way out. Join now and take up the small details for adjustment later.

Only one principle is involved. And that is that every human being is to be helped.

If your particular line of business will not stand the terms of the agreement or codes, you may be able to get temporary adjustments until you can swing into the full operation of the code governing your particular line.

Remember—Putting more folks to work, within the hour regulations and pay scales outlined is all we have to do.

When you cut your hours of doing business in order to keep from putting on more help, you are dodging the important point. The laborer must be paid, or he cannot trade.

We all need to swing into line quickly.

Forbid Cotton Futures Gambling

Senator Thomas charges the International Market Forecast Bureau with depressing the price of cotton. Mr. McGuigan denies the charge, saying he simply advises his clients; that is, that he makes them "wise" gamblers.

The thing Senator Thomas should do is to secure the passage of a law through Congress forbidding Mr. McGuigan, and every other man or company of men, from organizing gambling pools to bet that cotton will be, or will not be, a certain price by Christmas or by the 4th of July.

This principle of futures gambling is the means by which many billions of dollars are spent and the cotton crop bought and sold many times each year, and not a bale delivered, or even seen. And it is a practice that has caused the cotton farmer the loss of many millions of dollars every year.
