The Sooner the Better

The sooner Mr. Roosevelt cuts loose from the present banking system, which is practically the same prevailing for the past 50 years, the better it will be for the country.

The Federal Reserve Banks are governed by men whose dividends are affected by their management and they will most certainly take too much tribute off of the other fellow.

And, strange to say, for 50 years our Treasury Department has been in the hands of the real agents of the Bankers' Trust, with two exceptions. One of them was Daniel Manning, secretary under Grover Cleveland. He tumbled the bankers' load of silver and made them take it, when they tried their raid on the gold reserve. Yet this same gang finally managed to nestle in the bosom of the administration later on. The other time was when McAdoo made loans to the small banks from the Treasury balances held by the big banks on which they had formerly been making untold millions without paying a cent of interest to the government. And then Mr. McAdoo kicked the Bankers' trust office desk out of the Treasury building, where it had stood so long to dictate the monetary policies of the government's financial system. Later Mr. McAdoo was employed as attorney for the moving picture trust, and then later he seemed to have gotten into the game of receiving special favors from the very same bankers (The National City, for one); perhaps for his influence in helping to "skin" a lot of South Americans, doubtless many North Americans as well—because McAdoo's name put a fine flavor to bonds and made them sell well even if they were worthless.

The people ought to know by this time that the money-bags man is the fellow that betrays, bankrupts, and destroys. Mr. Roosevelt, watch them. They are dead against your NRA, because they know it helps the populace and lowers their dividends.

The Kaiser and Hitler

The Kaiser's "Me and God" expressions are being paralleled by Hitler's claim that "If any nation is entitled to Divine help, it is Germany."

He further states that the world does not understand Germany. Well, that is certainly true. Nobody has ever understood why any nation of highly civilized people should be so base as to tread on the rights and shoot down the Belgian people and cause the death of 10,000,000 people of the world. Nobody understands why she did that, yet everybody knows she did it, and that is just why they refuse to trust her now.

It is of course the general opinion that Germany's real purpose was to kill, slay, and cut her way south-easterly to the Indian Ocean and establish herself as a world empire, to which she proposed to make all nations bow the knee. Being whipped and failing in her purpose, she is now squealing.

Many people thought the Allies should have gone further when they crossed the Rhine.

Debts and Recovery

Oxford Public Ledger.

Somewhere down the line in its program, the recovery administration may well afford to include a "pay your debts" campaign.

Two prominent Oxford men, both of them in position to know something of the credit situation in the community—and this community may be considered an average of the state and nation—in an informal discussion, pointed out that any marked degree of prosperity must be preceded by an era of debt-paying, and that is true.

The average person is head-over-heels in debt and it is going to take determination and consistent effort to better this condition, especially as each day brings new opportunities for thoughtless spending as creditors hang on to hopes in writing anguish.

A clearing of debts will permit the creditors to open new avenues of employment by building, spending themselves and otherwise boosting the recovery program. As was said by the two conversers, there is no excuse for one running off and spending recklessly because of inability to pay all debts at once.

A conscientious effort in a program of debt paying could bring about a tremendous improvement in business before January 1. The NRA might well afford to declare a "Pay Your Debts" campaign.

The Value of Cooperation

The Government is now lending 1 cent per pound more on cotton than the New York market pays for an outright sale.

The value of cooperation by farmers is fully demonstrated by the fact that our farmers, by the formation of cooperative associations—which the government recognizes as essential to the success of agriculture—are now receiving 1 cent per pound more than the market price.

When farmers began the formation of cooperatives, the fight was so strong against them by the price manipulators, who played both the producers and consumers, that it was hard sledding, and only a few farmers ventured far enough to attempt to organize. Now, happily, nearly every farmer and business man has sense enough to know the value it offers and is willing to join his neighbors in an effort to save their business from merciless slaughter by the grafters.

How NOT To Pay Taxes

No man should pay his taxes by buying liquor. The man who advocates poor men paying their taxes by buying taxed liquor cannot be wise, according to our estimate of values. In fact, paying taxes by buying liquor is the most expensive method of paying taxes that can be devised.

If a man owes a dollar tax and spends 25 cents on his taxes and then spends the 75 cents left for some useful article for himself, his wife, or children, every reasonable man will say that he is wiser than the man who spends his dollar for whisky, of which 25 cents goes into liquor tax, and the balance, 75 cents, goes to the whisky manufacturer and seller.

The argument for paying taxes by buying and drinking liquor is so stupid that all thinking people should resent it.

Mr. Ford Should Sign

Mr. Ford should sign the NRA, although he has done more for labor than any other large-scale employer in the world and has sold as many dollars' worth of service during the past quarter of a century as any other man. Still, he needs to give full cooperation to the public program of the nation.

It seems his principal objection to signing is because he will have to bow to the House of Morgan which is the fountain head of his competitors, to the extent of having his books opened for inspection, and of course, it is an open secret that Morgan is noted for crushing his competitors.

There is probably some merit in Mr. Ford's stand, but the National Industrial Recovery Act is the law of the land, and no man can be a good citizen unless he obeys the law.

Fertilizer vs. Education

North Carolina has spent each year for 15 years an average of about twice as much for fertilizer as we are spending for education.

Yet our education is worth many times more than our fertilizer. We must remember that fertile minds well cultivated are worth far more than fertilized fields.

Educate and succeed, or don't educate and be a servant.

"Do It, We Will—"

Hertford County Herald

That quoted headline is from President Roosevelt's talk to the nation, by radio and newspapers, Sunday night. It was his third direct message to the people of the United States since assuming the Presidency in March. He was talking raising to higher levels the present prices of farm products. In that same firm and easily understood language that has characterized his talks with the American public, President Roosevelt made it plain that farm commodity prices would be increased beyond the present levels, especially those commodities which have shown little tendency to respond to the Federal Government's campaign to help the farmer. The increase in price would come, if not by one method, another and another will be promulgated until farmers receive a fair return for their work and investments.

Unstinted praise was given to Southern cotton and tobacco growers, and to the wheat farmers of the Midwest, for their almost unanimous cooperation in signing reduction contracts offered them by the Government. The response given in those programs of acreage reduction has cemented the faith that the President had in rural America, and it is because of the farmer's willingness to cooperate that this administration is going right ahead with its announced plan and determined program of bettering conditions for agricultural classes.

There is a whole lot more to this "Do It We Will" than appears on the surface. Here is a philosophy that some of us have been preaching in and out of season. It is a much used and often abused word—this "cooperation"—but it explains this latest positive assurance from the Nation's Chief that farm commodity prices must go higher. Who could have ever expected such assurance and such continued efforts to relieve agriculture, if those who engaged in it themselves had not responded quickly and wholeheartedly to the acreage reduction campaign? No one, of course.

It ought not only to teach us farmers something about cooperation, but it should put some of us to shame for holding off and permitting our neighbor sign and cooperate while we go on doubting, clinging to antiquated ideas and methods; and then walk up to the counter to receive the ultimate benefits. The same general proposition applies to those who come within the provisions of NRA as employers, as employees, and as consumers. It is a simple, old, every-day proposition we are dealing with here—just plain old cooperation.
