Liquor Business Is Like a Pole Cat

The Norfolk Ledger, a generally acknowledged wet journal, is apparently disturbed because there is a danger of getting wet people at the head of the liquor administration in Virginia. The paper, no doubt, believes that if such people are permitted to pass liquor laws and be charged with the enforcement that the liberties of the liquor folks in that good old Commonwealth will be greatly extended and the liberties of those who need protection will be greatly curtailed. Of course if that paper looks long and carefully, it will find there has never been a good liquor law passed by any nation or state. All those that have been passed, giving alcohol any privileges, have been nothing more than partnerships with Satan. The paper will find that liquor manufacturers and dealers as a class never obey any law they make themselves.

The liquor business is like a pole cat—it always leaves its smell wherever it goes, and no law can change the odor.

No Flowery Beds of Ease

It may be that some people are mistaken in the kind of prosperity Mr. Roosevelt proposes to give us. Some may think that his purpose is to set them on flowery beds of ease and plenty, furnish them a house and a home, plenty of food and a pot and kettle to cook in, doctor them when they are sick and by no means have them work for a living. Now, to all those who entertain such thoughts, it will be wise to change their thoughts, buckle on the harness of initiative and increase their work. They will find it to their own good to stop throwing what they earn to the four winds, and then expect their stomachs to be filled by public charity all the days of their lives.

All Mr. Roosevelt proposes to do is rescue the country from drowning, resuscitate the people. After they are firmly fixed on their feet, they are expected to go on their way and earn their own bread.

We trust that things, now coming so easily to many, will not cause the people to lie down and stop trying. There are many lessons for the American people to learn and one is to depend upon themselves and not try to crawl into another fellow's nest. They should make a nest for themselves from the materials at hand.

Al Smith's Attitude

Of all Americans who would like to see President Roosevelt's program fail there is none, in our opinion, more anxious than Al Smith, perhaps the most arrogant and jealous Democrat in the United States.

Mr. President, it is apparently advisable to look out for him. He is subject to knife you and your policies at any hour of the day or night. Nothing is done to suit him. He is a man that has not yet come to his senses. He still wants to be president.

Require The Truth

There is one thing we dislike, and that is the conflicting reports about tobacco sales. It is too frequent that we see such and such a market average was so and so, and lo when the sworn reports come out at the end of the month, the figures are about 25 percent lower.

It is time to require sales reporters to tell the truth about market activities. Of course the only way that the market average can be had is through sales managers or some company which is supposed to be furnished by each warehouse daily the number of pounds sold and the price received. When the figures are falsified, it is no less than pure fraud, because it is done generally in the hope to draw tobacco to the particular markets making such reports.

THE LETTER-BOX

To the Editor:
I understand that within two or three months the Federal government will distribute approximately $65,000 in Martin County for public improvements.

I want to suggest that the one mile of bad road between Williamston and the Conoho farm be looked after.

It seems to me the most practical way to improve the road is to have a wide open way at least 60 feet, so the sun can pour down its rays of light and heat and dry the golden mud out, or dig a canal or big ditch about 50 feet from the river would help to keep the road bed dry.

I believe this improvement should be made. The Conoho is a great farm, it is about three miles long and from a half to a mile wide. No better farm land soil in the county, located between two great swamps, facing the Roanoke River, and it is a hunters' paradise, where you can hear the wild cats squall, foxes bark and the owls hoot at night, and hear the wild turkeys, squirrels chatter and often see three or four deer at a time grazing with the cattle in the day time.

In making public improvements don't forget Conoho, Canoho.

Protect Us, Mr. President

Our present money system is rooted in a law passed under the leadership of John Sherman, coached by an English judge, sixty years ago. That was in a day when this country was poor and it worked well to the advantage of the British government for a number of years. In fact, it was really British diplomacy for British plunder that gave us the law. Things went smoothly for years and the American people knew nothing whatever about the leach that was gradually sucking them, because the Britishers did not suck very hard. They drew gently because they are diplomats and not despots. But when a certain class of our Americans grasped the situation they kicked the Britishers out and began at once to swallow up the American people and their institutions, consolidating and taking over to themselves all power and leaving the average man without a chance. They had the power to name the price of everything the little man had, and they exercised complete control.

No such graft and greed have ever been known in all the history of man as that practiced by our own American people at the expense of the masses. Recent investigations of big leaders and dominating institutions have uncovered the greatest schemes in all history.

Now, Mr. Roosevelt, protect and defend us from that unholy, greedy gang.

Cause of Untold Damage

The defective flue and the rotten shingle roof cause the loss of many millions of dollars every year. If every householder would examine the brick on edge flues and see if the bottom of the flue has settled down and left a crack and then repair them he will have safeguarded his property. And to add greater safety the owner could place tin on his roof if not all over then on that part where sparks are likely to fall.

Minor safeguards would save hundred of millions of dollars to property owners and the lives of many. Now is a good time to look after such things when we have to have hot fires and many sparks are flying.

Let Us Be Thankful

PICTURE in your mind a tiny snow-bound settlement of Prugged Puritans on the first Thanksgiving Day, in the November of 1621. Picture their rejoicings and their prayers of gratefulness to God for His mercies and kindnesses during a long, hard struggle for mere existence. They had much to be thankful for.

Surely, if they could make merry, we folks of today ought to be celebrating the event this year as it was never celebrated before. We have every reason for it... with the nation pulling out of history's worst depression and happier days ahead for everybody.

So, it is with a grateful appreciation of the many blessings that surround us that we extend our best wishes for a most happy Thanksgiving season to all the folks in this section—and particularly to those whom we serve.
