Beware of Soft Words

The National Association of Manufacturers is getting very tired of our government as it is now being run.

The trouble has all come about because the government has taken over the management of its own affairs and has taken it out of the hands of dominating wealth—a thing that goes mighty hard with the great financial powers.

There is also a vast difference in the line of thought and method of procedure as between the government and predatory wealth. The heartless money trust has used experts whose only business was to get all it could out of the public and pile it up in dividends. The government stepped in with a new line of thought and a desire to see that every man gets the proceeds and fruits of his labor, and has proceeded to put some restrictions on wealth by curbing its grafting power and extend the earning power of our country into every home that contributes to the production of the country's income.

Of course, the two per cent of the people of the country who own 80 per cent of all the wealth of our nation do not like the government's policy. You see it is like this. When the government looks at this small two per cent and asks them where they got it, they are embarrassed, because they know they got it by unfair methods of business which were little or no better than robbing and stealing.

All right, you 98 per cent of the folks; you own but 20 per cent of the country's wealth. The other 2 per cent has the wealth and they are mad because the government has blocked their plans to grab it all. Take warning at what these 2 per cent are saying. They pose as your friends, but believe them not—they are still your enemies. Stand behind the fellows that are trying to relieve you.

Protecting the Criminal

That article in the constitution which guarantees the sacredness of the home may have been a good thing in one case in a thousand, but in the other nine hundred and ninety nine instances it has protected dens of vice. Not only are residences used for bootlegging and gambling, but they are used as places of prostitution and to house almost every other vice known and practiced by man.

It isn't the honest, law-abiding man who wants the constitutional protection. It is the lawless that want to engage in law-breaking who hold that clause of the constitution so sacred, men who have no reverence for society and decency and who have no respect for law and order.

The officer who enters a home or makes any other advances is liable for all damages done or all errors made. The trouble comes only when they enter upon gangs of lawbreakers. The courts have held that the officer is the criminal when he enters a house without going through a long process of having papers issued, enabling the lawbreaker to escape.

It is unfortunate that we have laws against crime and a constitution that makes it almost impossible to detect and prosecute the criminal.

A Feasible Plan

Mr. Coleman W. Roberts, president of The Carolinas, Incorporated, has devised a unique scheme to advertise the Carolinas which seems quite feasible.

He proposes to sell stamps describing all the historic points and beauty spots in North Carolina, from Roanoke Island, the cradle of American civilization, to the "Skyland" of the western part of the state. These stamps will go to all points of the compass, telling why North Carolina is a good place to visit as well as a good place to live.

It is Mr. Robert's opinion that if we can get enough rich tourists to visit our state, they will go a long way toward paying our taxes, a thing we all hope for. Certainly, North Carolina has enough attractions to compete with any state in the Union.

Why not put our state advantages for both residence and pleasure before the people.

Man or Beast?

Speaking of Hitler—is he man or is he beast? He not only ruthlessly kills those who differ with him, but he goes further and refuses to allow their kinspeople and families to mourn over their loss.

Presidents Not Immune

Even Presidents are not immune from family troubles.

President Roosevelt's family has suffered the misfortune of having several divorces. We, of course, are not placing the blame on Mr. Roosevelt nor his children. Now we find President Wilson's daughter divorcing her famous husband, William G. McAdoo on account of incompatibility. Of course, we all remember the suspicions about President Harding, Grover Cleveland, who was a bachelor until he entered the White House, was charged with doubtful morals, which all points to the fact that neither wealth nor position insures perfect peace in life.

It is unfortunate to have such easy divorces among the upper crust of society. It naturally leads those who are less prominent to get the idea that the discarding of a wife or a husband is not so bad after all.

Too many divorces weaken the moral fiber of society and carry us just a step downward. Men and women need to count the cost before marriage and then stick to their vows.

A Poor Witness To Call Upon

The Industrial News Service quotes the National City Bank to prove a statement that is not true. In fact, that bank has done too many shady tricks to be believed, anyway. That bank's leaders are the same fellows that sold so many worthless bonds to innocent investors throughout the United States, and also are the same fellows who gobbled up so much valuable properties in Cuba, Mexico, and other Pan-American dominions and then wanted the United States to protect their ill-gotten gains, even if it took war to do it. No, thank you; the testimony of your witness will not stand in a court of intelligence and justice.

A New Source of Taxation

A new source of taxation has shown itself by the recent action of the Atlantic Beach ownership. They sold their bridge and the state has made it free. But, behold, when you get across to the beach you cannot get to the ocean to bathe without paying a quarter.

Now, let the state put a 50 per cent tax on their income and cut the maximum charge to 20 cents. Or it will be better for the state to acquire a strip of land on the beach and post a notice "Bathing free."

Twenty Years After

News and Observer.

Twenty years ago this month the World War began. Yet no one can say, on this day 20 years after, that the consequences of that conflict are even now drawing to a end. If that war had any meaning beyond savagery, if there was any purpose in its waging, Woodrow Wilson gave words to its meaning and its purpose. He called it a war to end war, and he called it a war to make the world safe for self-government.

Now, 20 years later, the world is still full of bloodshed and conflict. Men in many countries have spit upon democracy and spoken with savage scorn of man's right or ability to govern himself. Force has been deified. Man has been stripped of his dignity. And in addition to these the world still bears, unequal to the burden, the cost of the war said to be past and of wars said to be coming.

It is no wonder that men looking at the present world make bitter irony out of Wilson's statements that the war should end war and that war should result in the safety of human rights. These statements are ironical today. They make a joke too grim to be laughed at. But Wilson did not make that joke. It was made despite him by an American Senate and a world which chose "practical politics" rather than idealism. How practical those politicians were is pretty well demonstrated by the fate which has overtaken the world shaped by their politics.

Is it not about time that the world began to wonder whether such idealism as proposes a world ordered in cooperation and good will is not in fact more practical than the "practical politics" of the men who defeated Wilson's plans and made the war, which he had waged under a banner, merely a killing without purpose and the peace which they dominated no more than time for the breeding of new conflict and new war.

Wilson was beaten, but there is no evidence at hand to indicate that the world won. There is, indeed, every evidence that the 15 years since Wilson, who had won the war, lost the peace, have been years in which the world moved in foolishness into deeper tragedy. Wilson's idealism, 15 years after, still seems to offer the only practical way to world peace and world prosperity. The Nationalists have had their day, and a bitter day it has been. The dictator still struts, but he acts with a cruelty that makes evident his fears.

At such a time in such a world no mistake will be made if there is reexamination of the idealism which was repudiated by the "practical politicians."

Indications of Better Times

P. D. McLea in The State
Ever since former President Hoover uttered his immortal phrase "prosperity is just around the corner," all of us have been searching for signs of returning good times. First one thing and then another has been advanced as definite proof that every pot would soon contain two chickens and every garage a new car.

A lot of the new automobiles have appeared but there are still many pots without chickens, and the signs continue to bob up. One of the latest, and what may well become the brightest, is news that New York banks are making loans on real estate.

Real property has always been the basis of all wealth in America, and when the bottom-dropped out of the real estate market, following excessive inflation, there was no way by which agriculture and industry could be jacked up. Foreclosures on all classes of property brought distress not only to the occupants but to holders of many classes of securities.

Sheep growers of Washington and Tyrrell counties pooled 1,653 pounds of wool which they sold through the United Wool Growers' Association.
