Prejudice and Argument

We are glad that Tom Bost, our preacher friend and Greensboro News Raleigh correspondent, in his recent tirade against the McDonald candidacy, did not come right out point-blank and use the frequent argument of some that the candidate was born in another state

Of course, Preacher-Writer Tom has many times read the cruel story of how the wicked Jews tried to prejudice the people even against Jesus by asking "Can anything good come out of Nazareth?" and then how they had to change their charge and say that He stirerd up sedition; how they dropped the charge that He was a Nazarene and crucified Him because of new reasons altogether.

Mr. Bost, the preacher-writer, probably also knows that the real reason why Jesus was nailed to the cross was the jealousy of the rulers in Jerusalem who feared the loss of their jobs.

We are not trying to draw any parallels between the Crucifixion and any political campaign in North Carolina-or anywhere else, for that matter-but the thought simply occurred to us that over 1900 years ago it was found calling a man an "outsider" was a pretty sorry argument against his qualifications if he had anything at all to recommend him.

Are We Free Men?

The Emancipation Proclamation freed the Negro in 1863, and the American people marched along. Both white and black were supposed to be free until the organization of wealth and its claim to dominate the government. Then the liberty of the average man was taken from him. The laborer was forced by his employer to vote as directed or lose his job. This condition of affairs was practiced throughout the nation, finally reaching down to our own Southland; and has reached a state where officials of the government are commanded by their bosses to go out and tell the employees how to vote, with a veiled threat that if they did not follow orders they would probably lose their jobs. This state of affairs is decidedly worse than the old-time lash, because it wiped away

It is perfectly right to persuade a voter to vote your way if you use a truthful argument based on facts, but it certainly is not right when politicians use their power to scare voters into voting for certain candidates for governmental positions. We all remember four years ago, how certain units of government in our own state wielded the scepter of their appointing power over workmen to force them to vote their way.

The very meanest thing we have heard of so far, however, is where a man calling himself a party leader and a political guardian sets out to wield the "big stick" over an inmate of a county home, calling the unfortunate man's attention to the fact that "we have stuck to you" and at the same time intimating to him that unless he votes for certain candidates he may find himself "out," facing a cold, cruel, breadless world. Yet we are facing this condition in this state today; where men who feel that they are able to drive men are seizing the lash and seeking to wield it over those whom they can scare.

The Farmer Was Not Heard

The question of the right of an officer to run roughshod over the wishes of his people has several different phases.

If the people are ignorant and do not know right from wrong, it is certainly the duty of a governor to advise them; and when the people cry for bread no ruler has the right to cast them a stone.

The attitude of Mr. Ehringhaus in meeting thousands of his representative constitutents this week was beneath the dignity of the high office of governor which he holds. It is unfortunate for a man to outgrow and apparently to despise those who only so recently bestowed favors upon him.

It is strikingly strange that a man can so easily forget thousands and spurn their prayers and at the same time bestow all his favors and love on a small select bunch or group. We have two distinct tobacco groups in this state. The farmer was not heard, apparently because the governor listened to the wiser, richer manufacturing

A Mistaken Report

Certain reports on the speech of Clyde Hoey at Williamston Monday night appeared in state papers Wednesday, stating that he made some very drastic personal remarks about his opponents. Such was not the true facts; and, feeling that every man should be properly and accurately reported, we take this opportunity to say that Mr. Hoey was exceedingly courteous toward all candidates in every word he said; and his remarks would be classed as a modest, genteel speech by any audience. It was without bias or prejudice and, like all others he makes, excellent.

Re: Traffic Lights

Scotland Neck Commonwealth

Repetition sometimes forces a thought into the brain cells, and there it takes growth.

To continue verbal barrages against those two insipid stop lights that ingleriously swing over local intersections means nothing else than the people of this community, questioned separately and in a most unprejudiced manner, have signified their dislike for the lights in a most unmistakable fashion.

Now that the town fathers are here to represent the people in their endeavors, it is perplexing why the wishes of the citizenship are not carried out.

Constantly there have been complaints directed at those lights; in fact, ever since their arrival. They are unnecessary, unwanted, uncherished, desecrated, hated and defied.

For once, why cannot the likes of the voting public be obeyed? The people of Scotland Neck do not wish to be harrassed by unneeded lights. Tourists think them a joke. Any person who stops to analyze the situation will agree that they are as bothersome as a flat tire on the Jefferson Pike.

Please, town fathers, take them down. They will benefit a junk dealer more than they will automo-

If Capital Were Underdog

A Senate sub-committe, headed by Senator, La-Follette, is investigating the violations of civil liberties in industry. That may sound like an academic

In order to understand what it means to labor, let us suppose fo ra moment that labor were dominant and capital the underdog; that labor used the same tactics against capital that a section of capital is today using against labor

The chambers of commerce and the merchants' associations and the boards of trade in our various cities would each be afflicted with stool pigeons and spies planted on them by labor unions.

Business men, seeking to organize legitimate trade associations, would be beaten up by thugs. Provacateurs would issue fake leaflets designed to get these associations in wrong with the public

Every time a business man sought to exercise his right to organize a chamber of commerce or a board of trade, many newspapers would begin attacking him. It would be charged that his real purpose was not legitimate organization but the overthrow of democracy, and it would be implied that he was also hostile to marriage, that he was insulting to the flag and that he sought to undermine the church.

This is the kind of campaign that is carried on day in and day out against labor. Testimony before the LaFollette committee indicates that industry is spending some $80,000,000 a year on spies, provocateurs and thugs; that these professionals often deliberately stir up strikes or violence to create business for them-

A Costly Victory

Chattanooga News,

Fifteen years ago this fall the American football world was amazed when a team went from Danville, Ky., to Cambridge, Mass., and humbled the gridiron pride of fair Harvard. This was the famous "Bo" McMillan team, henceforward known as the "Praying Colonels."

What did this victory do to Centre College, the institution whence came the still famous team? Dr. Charles J. Turck, president of that institution, revealed, in a recent address that the victory was the 'worst thing" that ever happened to Centre. The year after the victory over Harvard, he related, 134 freshmen were attracted to the institution at Danville. Only 32 of them remained to graduate four years later. This is but another proof that the gridiron cannot safely be allowed to overshadow the campus or the classroom.

"That victory upset the whole town's judgment of college affairs," he lamented. Athletic spectacles really were not helpful to real college work. "We ought to get rid of this octopus and let commercial agencies of the sporting world provide the public these gladiatorial shows.'

Center-Lining the Highways

Morganton News-Herald

We are glad to note that as a safety measure the State Highway Commission will line the center of the concrete highways in North Carolina. When there is no traffic officer present, nothing makes a driver more conscious of his violation in passing other vehicles on curves and hills than the line in the middle of the road. Doubtless this step is to be regarded as evidence that the Highway Commission is making every effort to assist in making travel safer on the

Try CARDUI For Functional Monthly Pains

Women from the 'teen age to the change of life have found Cardui genuinely helpful for the relief of functional monthly pains due to lack of just the right strength from the food they eat. Mrs. Crit Haynes, of Easex, Mo., writes: "I used Cardui Easex, MO., writes: "I used Cardin when a girl for cramp and found it very beneficial. I have recently taken Cardul during the change of life. I was very nerveus, had head and back pains and was in a generally run-down condition. Cardul has helped me greatly."

Thousands of women testify Cardul benefited them. If it does not benefit YOU, consult a physicism.
