Mr. Bailey Is Agin It

Even if he thought it was constitutional, Senator Josiah W. Bailey said last week that he would be disposed to vote against the general farm bill for 1938. The senator may be right in predicting that the new bill will not solve the agricultural problem; he may be right in predicting that North Carolina farmers will not have as much cotton and tobacco to sell this fall. He pictures all the possible bad features the bill holds, forgetting all about the bad features that the old system of 1932 and 1933 holds.

Kentucky farmers, after going to great expense in increasing their tobacco production by about 100 million pounds, are reported to have received less for their crop in 1937-38 than they did for a normal crop a year ago. Mr. Bailey forgets all about that, or at least he never points out the defects of the system he apparently favors.

Mr. Bailey is staking his political life on the gamble that the 1938 bill will not prove workable, and to protect himself in that gamble he is doing and can be expected to do all in his power to make the plan fail. About the only thing the senator has ever proposed in behalf of agriculture was to pay a bounty to cotton farmers on their exports, a plan that cannot operate year after year without some degree of control over production. The senator can be depended upon to point to that absurd plan as his proposed contribution to the American farmer. The Senator has not advanced any plan of his own or cooperated in any plan advanced by others to check the return of the farm land of this nation to the feudal lords. He has done nothing, absolutely nothing, to correct the system that has taken nearly 70 per cent of the land from small owners and placed it under the tenantry system. He stands idly by and smiles as the land banks gobble up farm after farm and turn the victims of a cruel economic system into the highways to forage for a living. He will forfeit at the throne of wealth the life of the lowly man that the lowly man may die in a false freedom.

Farmers throughout the Southland are fast making plans for another crop. Under the haphazard system they do not and cannot anticipate the demand for their products next fall. The only guide they have is plant every acre possible and trust that the market manipulators will be fair to them. Once the crop is planted, they cannot shut down as Henry Ford and General Motors do. They have to follow it through and sacrifice their year's labor to the fancy of an organized middle market.

Yes, the 1938 farm bill may fail, but it will stand a better chance at operating successfully if Mr. Bailey and his kind will support and not attack it.

How Can We Keep Out of War?

Always a crusader for peace, Dr. Clarence Poe, editor of the Progressive Farmer, preaches a telling sermon on the subject in the two following paragraphs:

"Every generation hates war—yet every generation waits till too late to do anything about it. The result is that from each generation this bloody juggernaut god of war takes its hideous toll—puts into millions of graves the corpses of young men suddenly changed from beauty into carion, puts on other millions the crippling or mutilating wounds of its gory talons, and slowly suffocates other millions who have been exposed to its serpent-breach of poison gas.

"How can the youth of America be saved from the ever-threatening curse? Will our new so-called neutrality save some lives today but bring on consequences that will destroy a million lives tomorrow? In my opinion, your boys and mine will be far, far safer if America adopts a policy of world co-operation to promote peace than if it depends on mere isolation and neutrality as the way to peace. As has been well said: 'The world is now so small that for one nation to try to keep out of war when all other nations are fighting is like one man in a crowded room trying to keep neutral and unhurt when everybody else is shooting.' Would there not be perpetual fighting and death between individuals if we had no courts to which men could go and have their causes heard and settled—settled by courts whose government enforce their decrees? And are not wars between nations likewise inevitable so long as there is no Supreme Court of Nations to hear cases and with power to enforce its decrees?"

Little Travels to Homes of the Great

By H. B. C.

Anatole France, whose real name of Thibault is sunk in his literary signature, was born in Paris, April 16th, 1844.

His father, a wealthy bookseller, seems to have been a thoughtful, meditative man, and his mother, a woman of great refinement and tenderness. Their son showed the result of the double influence. Always fond of books, he early devoted himself to literary work, and made his debut as a writer in 1868 in a biographical study of Alfred de Vigny. He is the author of many novels and romances, and several volumes of essays, critical introductions to splendid editions of Racine, Moliere, La Fontaine, Le Sage and others, and numerous studies of men and books. In December, 1896 he was received as a member of the French academy. This fine artist writes with exquisite taste and grace. His perfection of style, clear, distinguished, scintillating with wit and fancy, furnishes a strong contrast to the painful and heavy style of some writers. He is an enthusiastic humanist, delicately sensitive to the beauty of the antique, the magic words, and the harmony of phrases.

Outside of France, his best known works, are, "The Crime of Sylvestre Bonnard," and "My Friend's Book," the former book being crowned by the academy. Into the character of Sylvestre Bonnard, that intelligent, contemplative, ironical, sweet-natured old philosopher, he has put most of himself. In "My Friend's Book," are reflected the childhood and youth of the author. It is a living book, holding the very essence of moral grace, written with exquisite irony, absolutely free from bitterness. The writer of these lines, knows one person who has read "The Crime of Sylvestre Bonnard" three times.

A Three Days' Cough Is Your Danger Signal

No matter how many medicines you have tried for your cough, chest cold, or bronchial irritation, you can get relief now with Creosolium. Serious trouble may be brewing and you cannot afford to take a chance with any remedy less potent than Creosolium, which goes right to the seat of the trouble and aids nature to soothe and heal the inflamed mucous membranes and to loosen and expel the germ-laden phlegm. Even if other remedies have failed, don't be discouraged, try Creosolium. Your druggist is authorized to refund your money if you are not thoroughly satisfied with the benefits obtained from the very first bottle. Creosolium is one word—no two, and it has no hyphen in it. Ask for it plainly, see that the name on the bottle is Creosolium, and you'll get the genuine product and the relief you seek. (Advt.)

West by the lands of M. D. Taylor, containing 50 acres, more or less. The 1-3 undivided interest in the above two tracts of land being all the right, title and interest of the said R. G. Harrison in the lands of his father, the late C. B. Harrison.

Tobacco Growers Know

I'VE GROWN OVER 67,000 POUNDS OF TOBACCO IN THE PAST FIVE YEARS. THE TOP GRADES OF MY LAST CROP WENT TO CAMEL AT BEST PRICES. THEY ALMOST ALWAYS DO. LIKE MOST PLANTERS, I SMOKE CAMELS. I KNOW THEY'RE MADE OF FINER TOBACCOS!

Tobacco planters work hard to produce the choicest leaf. They know who buys their finer leaf, too. "Camel" "most always does," says Cecil White. And he, like most other planters, smokes Camels. As he says: "We know what tobacco's in 'em." Camels are a matchless blend of finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS—Turkish and Domestic.

"WE SMOKE CAMELS BECAUSE WE KNOW TOBACCO"
