The Inconsistency of It All

It wasn't much to attract attention, but the ordering of a little Negro urchin to the gutter with his shoeshine box while bicycles blocked a third of the sidewalk just a few feet away offers in bold comparison the unfairness and inconsistency in this old world today.

The little fellow, busily rubbing the shoes of a considerate customer, cornered only a foot or two of the sidewalk. Probably he was working to get a dime for a show ticket, and probably he was violating the law by taking up two feet of a side walk that is admittedly quite narrow to accommodate the crowds that frequent the thoroughfare. Without murmur or complaint, the little fellow gave the officer an appealing glance, and realizing that the order must be obeyed even if it interrupted the transaction moved into the gutter to complete the task.

That boy knew he was violating a town ordinance, but he chanced to earn the dime or nickle with the full knowledge that he could move into the gutter if an officer happened along. He expected to move, and did move, without pointing to the five or six bicycles that were stacked side by side on the walk just a few feet away.

Too often the little guy who wanders just across the law's line in trying to make a living is called to answer while the big, strong fellow enjoys a greater freedom.

Move the bicycles.

A Modern Miracle

Those who would doubt the miracle of the few loaves and fishes, will find a situation even more baffling in the nation's banking just now. All told, the bankers have seven billion dollars in cash, buildings and furniture and fixtures. They have lent to Uncle Sam around thirty-five billion dollars. In addition to that they have lent about twenty-nine billion dollars direct to the people. And with what's left over they invested around eighteen billion dollars in tax free bonds.

Probably some such system ought to be devised for labor and agriculture, but so far the art of lending more than one has and drawing interest on what you haven't got is peculiar to the finance field. It's just one of those modern miracles, and takes place under an economic system that allows the laborer to starve and agriculture to go begging for a fair price for things that are actual.

Detail for Balanced State

News & Observer

"The public school system cannot compare with the prison camps in sanitation," John Faulkner, assistant engineer with the State Board of Health, told sanitary inspectors and engineers at a State College conference. The camps, he added, are "models of sanitation."

So the Balanced State can take a proper pride in the improved condition of its prison camps; it is nevertheless unfortunate that it cannot apparently be proud also of the sanitary condition of its schools. Of that school condition the news story of Faulkner's speech reported:

Faulkner said that privies are still used in 2,584 schools of the State with an enrollment of 248,000 children and that 114 schools with 4,100 pupils have no sewage disposal facilities of any sort.

Toilets in 26 per cent of the schools with commodes were found in an insanitary condition. Faulkner reported. His figures were based on a State-wide survey conducted last year in 4,194 schools with 964,836 children. He said the survey, which covered practically every school in the State, revealed progress in school sanitation and water supply since the last survey in 1931, but added "there is still considerable room for improvement."

No sensible person would wish to establish a balance between the convicts and the children by pulling the conditions of the prison camps down to the level of the public schools. But true patriots as well as parents should insist that the sanitary conditions surrounding the children in the schools be at least as good as those with which the Balanced State surrounds its criminals in its prisons.

New Auto Concern Opens This Week In Robersonville

Mr. H. Clifton Woolard Is Manager of New Business

Organized a few days ago, the C. and W. Motor Company opened for business in Robersonville this week in the building until recently occupied by the Better Chevrolet Company. The company, latest to be organized in the section's march of progress, is the only active dealer of Plymouth and DeSoto automobiles in this county.

The home of the new motor company is undergoing extensive repairs at the present time, and will be made into an up-to-date garage. No formal program marked the opening which came almost immediately following the organization of the company.

Headed by H. Clifton Woolard as manager, the company was formed by the following stockholders: Messrs. J. Lloyd Corey, R. L. Smith, C. H. Rawls, S. T. Woolard and H. C. Woolard.

The latest Plymouth and DeSoto models were placed on display by the company this week, and although repair work is underway, business is being handled by the management. Activities in the sales department are already off to a good start, and the new firm is expected to enter into the business life of the community and county rapidly.

Arrangements for maintaining a reliable service department are virtually completed with Mr. Lester Crofton in charge. A complete line of parts and accessories is being stocked, and service is available on all types of cars.
