Guests included the regular diners at the hotel and several invited guests who showered the honoree with many lovely and useful gifts. Bingo was played in the dining room until a late hour when fruit punch and coconut wafers were served to the approximately seventy-five guests.

Miss Barnhill Is Honored At Announcement Party

On Friday evening Mrs. Leman Barnhill and Mrs. Garland Woolard entertained about a hundred friends at the woman's club.

Pink and white roses were used in bowls and tall vases of other spring flowers were placed around the reception hall to make a lovely setting for the tables arranged for bridge and Chinese checkers. On the piano a huge bowl of purple iris and pink peonies were very effective and the punch table was decorated with ivy and pansies.

The hostesses and Miss Frances Woolard, of Greenville, received the guests and Mrs. J. C. Manning and Mrs. David Hix directed them to the cloak rooms. Mrs. Arthur White passed around tallies.

At each guest's place there was a bag of rice wrapped in colorful cellophane in which a card was embedded announcing the engagement of Miss Lela Brown Barnhill and Mr. Vernon Bunting, of Bethel. Their marriage will take place during the summer.

Mrs. R. L. Coburn received high score prize, a vase, and Mrs. N. C. Green was presented hose for second place. Consolation prize, bath powder, went to Mrs. K. D. Worrell. Miss Barnhill was given a bride's book and a lovely table lamp.

Punch was served during the evening by Mrs. G. H. Harrison and Mrs. A. J. Manning, Jr.

The refreshments were green and white cream and ices with cakes iced in green and nuts. Miniature bouquets of pansies added to the attractiveness of the plates.

Out-of-town guests were Mrs. Henrietta Williamson, of Farmville, Miss Woolard, Mrs. Aubrey Taylor, Mrs. Bill Pollard and Mrs. Murray Hodges, of Greenville, Mrs. Ferd Pollard, Mrs. Don Carson, Mrs. Christine James, Mrs. Henry Staton, and Mrs. J. B. Bunting, of Bethel, and Mrs. A. P. Barnhill, Mrs. Walter Bailey and Miss Edna Barnhill, of Everetts.

Soybean Meal Cheap Source Of Nitrogen

Prof. C. B. Williams, head of the agronomy department of State College, recommends soybean meal as a source of organic nitrogen in mixed fertilizers. He points out that it is cheaper than many other standard sources of this most necessary part of fertilizer formulas.

In answer to numerous questions about the value and comparative cost of soybean meal, Prof. Williams issued the following statement:

"During the past month a goodly number of inquiries have come to me with reference to the value of soybean meal as a source of organic nitrogen in mixed fertilizers. From the information which is available, this material is an excellent source, standing in excellence with such standard carriers as cottonseed meal, fish scrap

"From quotations which I secured the nitrogen contained in soybean meal, retailing at $27 per ton, cost 16 cents per pound while the nitrogen derived from cottonseed meal at $29 per ton cost 21 cents per pound.

"A considerable tonnage of soybeans have been crushed by the cotton oil mills of the State this year, making available their fine source of organic nitrogen for use by North Carolina farmers. At present prices, so far as our information goes, soybean meal is the cheapest source of organic nitrogen and cottonseed meal is next. Dried blood and fish scrap are more expensive carriers of this essential plant food.

"Soybean meal has been tried out as a source of part of the nitrogen in the fertilizer mixture on many of the leading crops grown in the State, such as cotton, tobacco and small grains, and its use has given excellent results."
