A Puzzle

The poultry situation in North Carolina presents a rather peculiar puzzle. Agricultural authorities point out that this State is not producing its poultry and egg needs. Despite the reported shortage on North Carolina farms, prices for the big food items are at a low point.

Adequate supplies can be shipped in from other states, and possibly market prices are held to a low figure by those shipments. But while North Carolina is importing poultry and eggs farmers in this section of the State are shipping out poultry and eggs. The business just doesn't make sense.

And agricultural leaders cannot be taken seriously when they urge farmers to raise more chickens when the market prices range from ten to thirteen cents a pound.

How They Do It

Eastern Carolina farmers with their wide level fields and a wide-range diversification have often wondered how western Carolina farmers manage to live. It's a settled fact that western farmers, as a whole, enjoy a better living than those in the eastern section of the State. And it has been a puzzle to understand how the mountain tillers of the soil could do so well with one foot in the mountain and the other in the valley.

Glancing through a recent issue of a western Carolina paper, we saw a long list of names under a small opening lead. At first we thought every school young'un in the county had met the honor roll requirements to get his name in the list. Closer observation revealed the names of several hundred farmers who had applied for limestone and phosphate shipments in an effort to better their lands.

Up until a few days ago, two Martin County farmers had applied for some of the soil-building material.

Possibly the big puzzle does not center around the western farmer and how he makes his living after all. The puzzle is centered around the eastern farmer and why he doesn't make a living.

No Apology Needed

There's been much said about the cold weather in the Sunny South. It's all right to explain that such cold spells as the one experienced recently are rare, but no apology is needed. In fact, things are coming to a pretty pass when one section has to apologize to another section for God's weather.

Down To Basic Facts

Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace, rapped for stating that those who desert the farmer will be held to account, recognizes a basic change in agricultural America today. And we admire him for that stand.

There was a time when the farmer was kicked from the table and nothing was heard from the farmer. Conditions have changed, and agriculture with its organized ranks can be expected to return measure for measure.

It is time to get down to basic facts and drag those facts into the open.

The time is not far distant when farmer and laborer will be looking to Washington for an accounting of all the things that have been done and of all the things that are to be done in the name of a people's government.

Business Should Stop Whining

Labor.

H. W. Prentiss, Jr., new president of the National Association of Manufacturers, tells the newspapers that Uncle Sam's budget "may be easily balanced" without an increase in taxes, and that all that stands between the unemployed and lucrative jobs is "the lack of sympathy for business" displayed by those in power in Washington.

Mr. Prentiss is president of a cork company, but the newspapers always reverentially refer to him as "a scholar." He may be a scholar, but it is unfortunate that he uses his education to convince business men they are the victims of "New Deal" persecution, and that the nation's financial troubles may be met by a mere turn of the wrist.

The fact is that during the last seven years the Roosevelt administration has done more for business than it has for either the farmers or the workers. To prove that, it is only necessary to consider the condition of business when Roosevelt came in, in March, 1933, and its condition today. Mr. Prentiss' own corporation would probably afford a fine example.

Roosevelt has done much for the farmers and the workers, and they are grateful. But business, which was on its knees frantically begging for help in 1933, and got it in generous measure, continues to whine. Scholarly Mr. Prentiss should take a more enlightened attitude.

How To Relieve Bronchitis

Bronchitis, acute or chronic, is an inflammatory condition of the mucous membranes lining the bronchial tubes. Creomulsion goes right to the seat of the trouble to loosen glandular phlegm, increase secretion and aid nature to soothe and heal raw, tender, inflamed bronchial mucous membranes. Tell your druggist to sell you a bottle of Creomulsion with the understanding that you are to take the way it quickly allays the cough or you are to have your money back.
