

President Compares 1939 With 1932 For Sake Of Politicians

Reminds Forgetful Citizens of Improvements During Period

In his address to the American Youth Congress, President Roosevelt reiterated and emphasized facts of recent history, which he had previously made at a press conference, lest persons with short or convenient memories forget them. With so many Republican candidates for office roaming the country trying to draw a veil over their party's blunders and to becloud present issues with irrelevant accusations, it is well for every voter who is a friend of progress to keep the President's statements constantly in mind.

"These past ten years," he said, "have proved certain obvious facts—some negative and some positive. We know that the prosperity in the Twenties—and a good many of you remember them—the prosperity of the Twenties can properly be compared to the Mississippi Bubble days before the bubble burst—when everybody was money-mad, when the money changers owned the temple when the nation as a whole forgot the restraint of decent ethics and simple morals, and when the government in Washington gave completely free rein to what they called individual liberty, gave completely free rein to the virtual ownership of government itself by the so-called best minds—best minds which wholly controlled our finances and our economies, and forgot our social problems.

"During those ten years you cannot find a single statute enacted for the restraint of excesses, enacted for the good, the betterment of the permanent security of the individual. That is a straight-from-the-shoulder fact, a sad fact, which the American public fortunately has not forgotten.

"It is also a simple straight fact that in 1930, 1931 and 1932, those years saw the collapse and the disintegration of the philosophy of the Twenties, followed in February and the first three days of March, 1933, by an acknowledgment on the part of those who had been the leaders that they could no longer carry on.

"Just by way of further illustration of the fact that we have been making progress since those dark days, not as great progress, of course, as we want or think, but just by way of illustration, let me repeat certain comparisons that I gave the other day at a press conference, comparisons between 1932 and 1939.

"Now let's see. The national income from all sources has increased from $40,000,000,000 in 1932 to $68,500,000,000 in 1939—in other words plus 71 per cent.

"Wages and salaries have increased from $2,400,000,000 in December, 1932, to $3,888,000,000 in December, 1939—plus 62 per cent.

"Weekly factory payrolls increased from $80,000,000 in December, 1932, to $197,000,000 in December, 1939—plus 145 per cent.

"Cash farm income increased from four-billion-seven in '32 to seven-billion-seven in '39 and with the addition of farm benefits payments of over eight-hundred-million to a total of eight and a half billion dollars or plus 82 per cent.

"Dividends of corporations—most of you, most of us, don't get many of them, but never mind—dividends

"You have heard of certain local or special opposition to our foreign trade policy—listen to this: our exports, that means goods that we made and sold outside the country, our exports for the calendar year of '32 were worth a billion-six-hundred-million, but in '39 they had gone up to nearly three-billion-two-hundred-million—an increase of 97 per cent."

Fifty-One Children Killed In Streets

"Fifty-one children were killed in North Carolina last year while playing in the streets, and it is high time the people of North Carolina resolved to do something about this," Ronald Hocutt, director of the Highway Safety Division, declared recently in commenting on the prevalence of this type of accident.

"It is the obligation of local citizens to eliminate this blotch on our safety record. One way to do this is to provide ample playground facilities so that the children will not have to play in the streets; another way is to see that your children are made keenly aware of the dangers of this practice; and a third way is to be constantly on the alert for playing children when you are driving."
