This new kind of road is called Soil-Cement . . . based on the discovery that when you mix cement carefully with roadway soil, and compact it, you have a strong, durable pavement for your light traffic roads. The method, though scientific, is easy. First come laboratory tests to learn the exact amounts of cement and moisture needed. Then the highway engineers use these tests to guide them in construction. Inexpensive equipment is used.

Soil-Cement Proved in Service Hundredsofmiles of Soil-Cement roads now in use have proved the durability of this construction for light traffic roads. Soil-Cement is not intended for use on beavy duty roads. For such roads portland cement concrete is the most economical pavement. Soil-Cement does offer new economy and uniformity for light traffic roads. Urge your officials to build with Soil-Cement.
