Moving This Week

Governor-elect J. Melville Broughton and Mrs. Broughton with their four children are moving this week to the Governor's Mansion in Raleigh. It'll be only a short distance, but one of the children, fearing that he will not be allowed the run of the place, has suggested that the old mansion be rented and that the family be allowed to maintain its present residence. Taking over the executive reins of the State government Thursday, Mr. Broughton, Mrs. Broughton and their four children, Alice, 20; Melville, Jr., 18; Bobby, 15; and Woodson, 12, are moving shortly to the mansion.

Junior Auxiliary Meets On Saturday

The Junior Auxiliary of the American Legion met Saturday, January 4th, at 3 o'clock in the home of Lula Purvis Gray in Robersonville. We pledged allegiance to the American flag and repeated the preamble of the Constitution of the American Legion Auxiliary. After this, the president led in prayer.

Seven members were present to approve the minutes as read by the secretary and to discuss the business of the Auxiliary. A letter from state headquarters was read so that we could find what was required of this organization in the coming year. It was learned that a North Carolina flag was expected of us.

After discussing several ways of raising money to pay for the material for the flag, it was decided to sell small sewing kits. Then Margaret Johnson, program chairman for this month, gave the following program on "Legislation": "The Constitution of North Carolina and Its Government," by Margaret Johnson. Lula Purvis Gray talked about "North Carolina Labor Laws." "The Progress Made by Public Schools During the Term of Governor Hoey," and "Legislative Events" of North Carolina by Muriel Wynn. "The Old North State" was sung in unison. Then the program chairman gave a summary of the United States legislative acts of the last session of Congress. Together we sang, "The Star-Spangled Banner." The hostess served delicious ambrosia, cake and salted pecans. —Reported.
