Increased Interest Is Being Shown In Local Girl Scouts

Feeling the need of the local Girl Scouts for a meeting place of their own, Messrs. Frank and Irving Margolis have given them two rooms above their store on Main Street to be used for meeting and social events.

In cooperation with the scouts, Mr. D. N. Hix, principal of the local high school gave the boys in the work shop credit on their year's work for making two benches and a book case from lumber donated by the Farmville-Woodward Lumber Company and Williamson Supply Company.

The scouts have cleaned up the room, scrubbed the floors and windows and will furnish and decorate it themselves.

To use these rooms as a recreational room, the scouts plan to have a small library of their own and will appreciate any discarded books.

Meetings are held every Thursday night at seven o'clock and new members are always welcome.

Under the leadership of Miss Evelyn Litley and her assistant, Miss Marjorie Grey Dunn, the girl scouts have aided in a number of worthwhile civic projects.

Members of the Williamson girl scout troop are Misses Mary Warren, Della Jane Mobley, Ann Fowden, Alberta Knox, Jane Johnson Goff, Ann Meador, Frances Jarman, Betsy Manning, Frances Thomas, Angelia McLawhorn, Gertrude McLawhorn, Sylvia Green, Barbara Margolis, Dora Twiddle, Gloria Roberson, Lucy Roberson, Thelma Carroll, Mildred Lassiter, Nancy Mercer, Maxine Lassiter, Rose Leggett, Edna Ray Thomas, Barbara Enright, Lib Taylor, Mary O'Neal Lindsay, Ann Lindsay, Gloria Hayman, Eliza Daniel, Margaret Ward and Unis Anne Britton.

Father and Son Meet After Twenty Years

For more than a year, two men—one elderly, the other young—exchanged furtive glances when they met at a tool crib window in the Pontiac Motor Division plant.

Carl Farner is a skilled grinder in the tool repair department. Max Bryan, 24, is serving an apprenticeship in the same trade as a "tool chaser"—he brings dulled tools to the grinding department for re-sharpening. Thus the two met frequently at the window, looked intently at each other beneath lowered lids and hurried away.

One day last week Max Bryan pushed his stool-laden cart up to the receiving window. The attendant turned to Farner who was standing nearby and said:

"Here's plenty of work for you, Farner."

"I used to know a man named Farner," he said. "My name is Max Bryan."

"I used to know a boy named Max," the elderly man replied. Then he stopped short and grabbed the youth by both shoulders, peering intently at him. There was a long moment of silence.

"Hello, son," said Carl Farner. "Hello, Dad," said Max Bryan.

There—among snarling machinery and rumbling trucks—father and son had met again after twenty years.

Max Farner was a child of five when his mother and father separated. When his mother remarried he took the last name of his step-father but he always remembered that his true name was Farner.

In the twenty years that passed son had wondered about father and the father had wondered about son, they both now say, but had never been able to locate each other.

"I always thought he looked familiar, seeing him at the tool window gave me the funniest feeling that I was seeing myself thirty years from now," the son says. "But I never had the nerve to ask his name."

"The kid looked familiar to me, too," says Farner. "But finding him here—almost in the same department—was too much like story book stuff for me to believe. I always figured that I was just kidding myself."

Good Investment For U. S. Business

The most important investment American business can make in Latin America is in "men," according to Cornelius V. Whitney, authority on Inter-American trade and a founder of Pan American Airways. In a recent talk to a group of New York businessmen, Whitney said the caliber of representatives selected by American firms for work in Latin America might make the difference between "profit and loss" over a long period of time. He listed the major qualifications as follows:

1. Language—A knowledge of Spanish or Portuguese, or both.
2. Deportment—Courtesy is of utmost importance in doing business south of the equator, according to Whitney.
3. Education—A knowledge of the customs and history of the country is important as background.
4. Mutuality—A willingness at all times to "give-and-take" in equal amounts and with an eye for developing lasting trade relationships.

period of time. He listed the major qualifications as follows:

Miseries COLDS RELIEVED FAST

Put 3-purpose Va-tro-nol up each nostril... (1) It shrinks swollen membranes; (2) Soothes irritation; (3) Helps flush out nasal passages, clearing clogging mucus.

We Have Moved To the Bowen Building

WASHINGTON STREET — WILLIAMSTON

As stated several times before we have vacated our store on Main Street. However, due to the fact that we still have a fairly large stock we will be located in the Bowen Brothers building long enough to dispose of the remainder of our stock.

Merchandise at and Below Cost

If you are looking bargains, our stock is still large enough to adequately supply your needs. Our shoe stock is especially large and we have many unusually fine bargains in yard goods. Pay us a visit first when shopping in town. We'll guarantee to save you money.
