Wide Variety Books For Men At Ft. Bragg

Fort Bragg — Keeping the new army supplied with reading material is one of the big jobs in the current expansion program.

Here at Fort Bragg, as the first of the five service club libraries went into its eighth month of operation, it was disclosed today that 25,000 volumes have been purchased by the Quartermaster Corps, as well as subscriptions to the leading national magazines and newspapers from the largest cities east of the Mississippi.

Miss Bessie Mae Cowan, librarian at a typical Fort Bragg service club, described her 5,000 volume allotment as a widely varied selection and representative of the tastes of the 2,200 service men who have membership cards. "We have many fine editions of the classics," she said, "as well as contemporary authors." The non-fiction section includes text and reference books on various subjects relating to military life.

gan, Mamie Clyde Long.

Ninth grade: Nell Holliday.

Tenth grade: Grace Brewer.

Eleventh grade: Ray Stallings, Ella Ange, Betty Calloway, Carolyn Hassell, Virginia Hassell, Frances Wallace.

Mr. Vaden Hairr spent the weekend in Clinton.

Miss Viola Waters spent the weekend with her mother in Pantego.

SMOKE BETRAYED A GREAT BLOCKADE RUNNER

"What's in a name?" is a question often asked, but seldom answered. Yet great men's names are left behind them and are much used by posterity.

This is a story of the name of a great North Carolina war governor, Zebulon B. Vance, boats, and bituminous coal from the mines near Sanford, N. C.

The new $9,000,000 ship yards at Wilmington are a part of the national defense program. The first vessel launched there was the Zeb B. Vance and this reminds us of another war and another boat that bore the name of Vance.

Lincoln's blockade of southern ports was an important factor in the winning of the Civil War. That blockade gave birth to a number of fleet grey blockade runners. The most noted of these vessels in the service of North Carolina was the Ad-Vance. This vessel's mysterious disappearance and reappearance under the cover of night's black shadow is one of the thrilling episodes of the Civil War.

The Ad-Vance was a first class vessel and had engines of great power. Her speed was good, for with a pressure of thirty pounds to the square inch she could reel off twenty knots to the hour without difficulty.

To run the blockade, it was necessary to slip out at night and hug the shore as closely as possible. With all steam on, the blockade runner would dash up the coast with the speed of a thoroughbred on a hotly contested race course.

On the return trip from Bermuda in July, 1864, the Ad-Vance was discovered by the federal blockading fleet that opened fire. The federal boats gave chase like a pack of hounds in eager pursuit. There was great danger for it was necessary to keep a direct course until she could round a shoal and run in toward the port. Shot and shells were flying, but she held steadily to her course rushing onward to what seemed to be certain destruction. Suddenly a roar was heard from the fort. The heavy guns had opened fire upon the pursuers with such effect that the hard pressed vessel was protected.

There was a different story in September of '64 when a trail of smoke betrayed the Ad-Vance. The Confederate government had taken the hard coal for the use of another boat, and the blockade runner had to put out to sea with North Carolina coal. This coal is inferior and very bituminous. The vessel would hardly make half her usual speed and left behind a trail of dense black smoke. She successfully made her way through the blockading squadron, but she was easily followed by the trail of heavy smoke. That was the end for the Ad-Vance, a valuable blockade runner,

Some New Farm Machinery Will Be Available In 1942

David S. Weaver, agricultural engineer, says some new farm machinery will be available in 1942, but the supply will not be nearly as much as the demand. For this reason, he is urging farmers to repair as much of their present equipment as possible and to take good care of what they have on hand. Also he is urging that all scrap iron and steel be collected and sold to junk dealers.

AN IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT

TO PROSPECTIVE BUILDERS!

BECAUSE of emergency priorities on copper wire and other materials essential to our country's defense effort, we are obliged to alter our practice with respect to extension of service to locations not on existing distribution lines.

Priority rules covering use of materials make it important that anyone who contemplates building on a site which is even a short distance removed from existing distribution lines should discuss with us in advance of starting to build, the question of availability of Electric Service. In other words, it is necessary that you FIRST find out whether we are allowed, under priority rulings, to make the required Electric Service extension.

This change in policy is due not to any shortage of electric power in Virginia Electric and Power Company served territory, but to a shortage of materials necessary to defense. It is our desire to co-operate fully with the Government in the defense program, and to that end we are appealing in this way to all prospective builders for their help in living up to the spirit as well as the letter of all emergency rulings governing use of materials.
