

The Home Front Is All Important In Winning This War

Victory Is Going To Cost the Home Front Plenty and Many Sacrifices

Washington—This war is going to be won on the home front. The home front is all-important in total war. The home front saved Britain after Dunkerque; it was to the home front—to the betrayed and deluded people of Germany—that Hitler addressed himself with between-the-lines hysteria last week-end.

We Americans are all-out for victory on this front. We're all of us determined to keep the raw materials for victory flowing into our industrial plants and the finished weapons of war streaming from these plants to the fighting zones until Adolf is in the ashcan, and Japan on the junkheap, and the poor, misguided Italians are ready to dunk II Duce in the Tiber.

Of course, every victory has its price. Right now we can begin to see clearly what victory is going to cost the home front, and it's plenty, although a small sum to pay for such values as liberty, and the right to pursue happiness and work for a decent sort of world.

Victory is going to cost some manufacturers their business, for the duration, as metals are diverted from—let's say new pots and pans—to guns and tanks. Victory is going to mean virtual conscription of hundreds of industries; grief to management and distress to workers as they shift from the uses of peace to the uses of war.

In the home itself, the price of victory will include increasingly drastic rationing. Sugar and tires were just starters. We can look forward to a time when a new radio may be just as hard to come by as a new car. Scarcity of materials needed for Army and Navy and Lend-Lease is going to combine with scarcity of industrial facilities—as more and more factories are drafted into the war effort to change our lives tremendously. The needs of Army and Navy are going to affect the styling of our clothes, as well as our diets. We know we may count on the new Price Control Act to operate, along with rationing, in the direction of fair prices. But we also know that the farm price provisions of the act may lead to an increase in the cost of foodstuffs.

Almost all the trends developed during the past week have direct bearing on the home. There's a war Production Board survey now going on which, taken with WPB's

Opens Up Clogged Bronchial Tubes

Missionary to Speak In Hassell Sunday

Mr. E. H. Higdon, formerly a missionary to the Philippine Islands, will speak at the Hassell Christian Church next Sunday at 8:00 o'clock. Mr. Higdon is a man of travel and wide experience. He is also executive secretary of United Christian Missionary Society for the Orient. The community is fortunate and a full house is expected.

warning of stringent rationing to come, points the direction in which we're headed. WPB is questioning 10,000 manufacturers to find out just how much minimum civilian production they must maintain along with maximum military production.

Such things foreshadow change, and change we will have—change in the familiar contents of the kitchen shelves, in the contents of our closets and bureau drawers, in our living rooms.

We're going to see a lot less of the tin can, which is going through this war primarily as a container of meat and vegetables. Already WPB has halved the amount of tin which may be used in cans for baking powder, beer, biscuits, candy, cereals, flour, chocolate and cocoa, dog food, spices, condiments, petroleum products, tobacco.

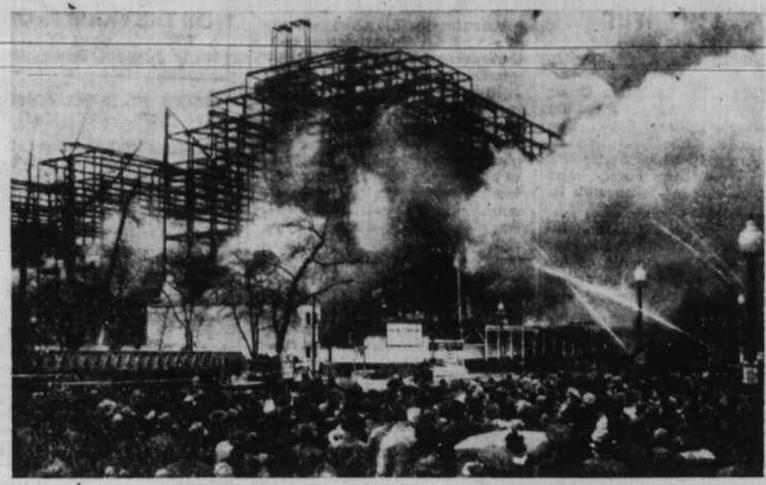

There's been a lot of beer poured into tins. In 1941 beer cans consumed 1,600 tons of scarce tin—more than was used to can any vegetable except tomatoes. . . . Along with the cans, WPB is drafting a part of their contents, plans an order withholding a percentage of the 1942 fruit and vegetable pack as a reserve for the armed forces and Lend-Lease. . . . Sales of sugar may be limited to three-quarters of a pound per person per week. . . . That's enough. . . . There'll probably be enough of the commoner spices, too—except cinnamon. . . . We've more than two years supply of East Indian pepper in the warehouses. . . . WPB found it possible to relax restrictions on fats and oils. . . . A break for makers and users of salad oils, shortening, lard, soaps, paint.

Women's styles probably will be altered by the need to conserve all kinds of cloth, chances are we're in for a period of slim silhouettes and short skirts. But it looks as though the foundations are safe, anyway. . . . WPB's rubber branch is going to make a limited amount of crude rubber available for foundation garments, girdles, corsets. . . . Manufacturers will conserve by design changes, partial substitutions.

As for coats and dresses, members of the women's coat and suit industry have assured WPB that women will be well-styled and warmly clad "whatever amount of wool the Government gives us. . . . Plan is to blend used and reworked wool with cotton, rayon and virgin wool. . . . There'll be more rayon stockings. . . . Silk stocks are virtually used up, most of the nylon supply will soon be needed for military purposes.

Women and the work of war: (1) WPB doesn't want "a broad wave of knitting that will consume millions of pounds of wool needed for more essential purposes." It does want women to knit sweaters when commanding officers have asked for them. To be sure, ask the Red Cross. (2) WPB Labor Director Sidney

Fire Destroys Partly-Finished Capital Hotel

A five-alarm fire, fanned by a high wind, gutted the partially-completed $5,000,000 Hotel Statler in Washington, D. C., causing damage estimated at one million dollars. All firemen on leave were called to duty and gained control of the flames after a stubborn battle of two hours. Soldiers and sailors were called to control the crowds.

Blood for the Armed Forces

Monoxide Gas Kills Chicks In Brooder

"Keep 'em laying" is the poultry farmer's adaptation of the famous war-time slogans of today. C. F. Parrish, Extension poultryman of N. C. State College, says, "to keep 'em laying, we must keep 'em living." He reports that thousands of baby chicks are killed in brooder houses of North Carolina every year by carbon monoxide (the gas that kills motorists who start their autos in closed garages).

Enough of the deadly gas may accumulate in a poorly-ventilated brooder house, heated by a wood, coal or oil-burning stove, to kill every baby chick in a short time. "Protecting chicks from death by carbon monoxide is more important this year than ever before," Parrish declared, "because of war needs for eggs and poultry." Carbon monoxide chick losses are often highest on cold, stormy nights, when windows and ventilators are closed to protect the birds from cold and dampness. As the burning flame in the brooder stove consumes oxygen, combustion becomes less complete, causing an accumulation of carbon monoxide fumes. Soot collects, increasing production of the deadly gas.

At first the chicks become uneasy, go into a drowsy stupor, their breathing becomes labored and their gait wobbly. As gas poisoning progresses, they appear chilly, gasp, fall, lie on their sides with heads thrown back and generally die in spasms.

"If these symptoms are noted," the extension specialist said, "the poultryman should remove the birds to fresh air immediately. . . .
