The Nerve Of Mr. Bailey

Josiah W. Bailey, the shouting plutocratic democrat, so-called, is asking the poor democrats of North Carolina to return him to the United States Senate. It would seem that Mr. Bailey possesses a great store or nerve, or gall, to ask such a favor of the honest-to-goodness democrats. Judging from his record, he has no right to ask the farmer, the working man or the average fellow to support him. He can look to the old political machine in the State for aid and ask its support with a clear conscience, and the Republicans will do well to disclaim their party affiliation and support him, but the common man, the masses, are not indebted to Josiah Bailey for one thing.

Mr. Bailey who is a candidate on the democratic ticket is the same Bailey who ate at the republican table, worshipped at the shrine of the privileged and the well-to-do when the masses of his people back home were hungry, when the farmers were at the very gates of serfdom. His acts, his talk and views were so closely interwoven in the Republican pattern that he was mentioned as a likely candidate for President, but, mind you, on the republican ticket.

Now, Mr. Bailey, the same Bailey who was mentioned as the republican party presidential nominee, is asking the democrats of North Carolina to send him back to the United States Senate. The nerve of Mr. Bailey is galling to the common masses and to those who still profess to be democrats as democrats are understood in this part of the world.

Public To Police Rationing

Years in prison and fines ranging up to $10,000 have been mentioned for those who would dare violate the rationing laws. The system of prosecution is not quite clear, but it is reasonable to believe that the cowardly and unpatriotic acts of somebody will be cited as an example for others not to follow. The success of the system, it would seem, depends upon policing by the public.

It is well for public opinion to heap condemnation down upon those who would take advantage of their fellowman in his neighborhood, in the trenches, in the air and on the high seas. But in policing the rationing system, each of us should not be too critical of the other fellow. The facts in every case should be determined before the lips are opened against any man, white or black, rich or poor. Each one of us should analyze each individual case before heaping criticism on the head of any one.

That our unity might obtain, we will do well to cling to tolerance in doubtful cases, and release criticism and condemnation only when it is definitely determined that the victim of our verbar wrath is violating the principles of fairness and decency. The rightly condemned by public policing should not fight back, but should admit the error of their ways and alter their courses that their efforts might be brought into line with those pointing to unselfishness and fairness and ultimately to common victory.

If your conscience permits of excessive and unnecessary travel and the hoarding of sugar and other foods and a do-nothing attitude toward the war effort, then don't get mad and threaten to shoot your neighbor when he points out the yellow streaks that stand out in bold relief on your body.

Some Chickens

During 1941 a total of 636,613,000 chickens were produced on American farms, the largest number since 1936 and 18 per cent larger than the total for 1940.

A Friendly Warning

In order to assure yourself an ample supply of coal for next winter, the Government is urging you to fill your bin now. In all fairness to your coal dealer, it is imperative that any balance you might owe on last winter's coal be paid now, in order for him to secure coal for the mines to supply you.

The terms of sale at the mines are fixed by Federal Government Law. If a coal dealer fails to pay his bills by the 20th of the month following shipment, a penalty of 5% is assessed and collected, and if a coal dealer expects to keep coal on hand for his customers he must pay his bills promptly. The mines ship those dealers who pay promptly and with the brisk demand for coal at this time they will not ship coal to those in arrears. Freight on coal amounts to an average of $3.45 per ton which must be paid according to law within 48 hours after the arrival of the car. Labor and supplies are cash. Faced with the necessity of paying spot cash for over half the cost of the coal and the balance in 30 days, your coal dealer cannot put your coal in now and collect next Fall.
