Just A Mere Coincidence

It may have been just a mere coincidence, and some will say it was business foresight, but the role the Standard Oil Company is playing in this war adheres, it would seem, closely to the old policy of business first and country second.

Not so many months ago, the Standard Oil buried huge tanks around many if not all of its filling stations. No objection even if the act was advanced when steel and metal were rapidly becoming scarce. Then the tanks were filled or partly filled. And then rationing started, the allotments being based on deliveries made in certain designated periods. Some dealers were able to get large quantities of gas, one burying about $2,000 worth in the ground. Another dealer, so the reports state, had a monthly quota that would ordinarily last him during normal times for about three months.

Yes, it is understood that a Standard Oil Company man was in Washington directing the rationing system.

When other companies were reporting empty tanks at their bulk plants and running here and there trying to get enough gas to supply their customers, Standard Oil tanks were literally bubbling over.

Standard Oil, still singing and boasting its part in supporting the war effort, denies it had anything to do with Farbenindustrie, the German chemical trust, that proved detrimental to this country. And maybe it did nothing wrong, but it is hard to believe that Standard Oil has gone all out in supporting the war effort when its work in the field fits so nicely into the picture at Washington, or the work in Washington fits so perfectly into the picture in the field.

Curtail Your Aches and Pains

Roxboro Courier. The war has done funny things to the economic life of the nation. Therefore it is not a surprise to learn that the medical profession urges the public to curtail aches and pains for the duration of the emergency. With more than ten thousand physicians already in Army uniforms, and another six thousand required in 1942, there will not be sufficient physicians to take care of increasing civilian practice.

Of course, as most everybody knows, there is little or nothing the matter with many "sick people." The doctors know this. They think that the needs of the public can be met if individuals will pay closer attention to matters of health by adopting a good diet and getting plenty of rest. Naturally, all excesses, whether of over-eating, over-working, over-drinking or over-exercising, are to be avoided.

"Sneaked Away Under Cover"

Elkin Tribune. At their meeting in Raleigh last week the North Carolina Merchants Association called for the elimination of the sales tax—completely. Having fought it through the years, that was not surprising, but to say that the merchants were optimistic enough to expect that to eventually, would be stretching the imagination too far.

They pointed to the big surplus the State now has in its treasury, but that will melt away with the curtailment of other incomes, and the surplus will be needed to carry on. And of course there is that never-answered question, "Where will you get the money to replace the sales tax?" It is not enough to remind that we managed to get it from somewhere before the sales tax was invented, for we are demanding more of government now than we did back yonder. But if the merchants could only discover some new source of revenue, they would be taking a tremendous load off the backs of the small-fry.

North Carolinians have become calloused to the sales tax. A former governor has told us that we will have it with us always, and seemed to get quite some satisfaction in the telling. But its burden will become more noticeable if and when Congress fastens a federal sales levy on the country. It will amount to double taxation here in North Carolina, and if ever there was a time when the tax, adopted for emergency and under the solemn promise that it would be lifted when emergency had passed, had the way wide open for exit, it is right now, when this federal threat is haunting the people.

The editor of the Window Seat Weekly, commenting on the prospects of a federal sales tax sums up its inequities this way:

"It hits poor people the hardest . . . It raises living costs, the very thing we are tearing our government shirts to prevent—even the President's shirts . . . We are dragging money away by force from the very class of people we ought to urge—maybe compel—to buy war bonds as a cushion for the war-end rainy day . . . There are cowardly reasons for this tax, but I don't know any good ones, except that it is the easiest tax to pay because your money is sneaked away under cover, when you don't think about it. But it is sneaked away just the same."

Even the most zealous advocate of the sales tax will agree with that appraisal in every detail, but just let somebody suggest that it be abandoned and they'll back off like a cat from the fire.

The merchants, who have to collect the tax without remuneration, are right in holding it up to scorn, for some sweet day the people will rise up and smite it—new source or no new source. It is significant that it was sales tax money which was stolen by the half dozen men connected with the revenue department. Could it be that they considered it so unholy that it didn't matter much what happened to it?

Do Human Beings Matter To God? Why?

By REV. JOHN HARDY Church Of The Advent

Whether or not human beings matter to God depends entirely upon what God is like. For example whether or not a soldier matters to his captain depends entirely upon what kind of man the captain is. If he is a man of large sympathies and deep feeling the individual will matter intensely. If, on the other hand, he is a man of blood and iron, the soldier will matter only as he is incidental to his own purpose. And if the captain has become magnified into a War Department which in turn has been so impersonalized as to be little more than a bureau of military statistics, the soldier will not matter at all. In the same way, if God is only an abstract principle or an unconscious power there is no reason to suppose that men will matter to Him any more than asphalt matters to a steam roller. But if God is the Moving Spirit of the universe and has made Himself most explicit in the life and love of Jesus, it is impossible to suppose that men do not matter to Him. Such is the God of Christian faith.

To a God like that human beings COULD matter. The fact that He is so big increases rather than decreases the possibility of His care for individuals. The bigger and greater the man, the more acute is his interest in and knowledge of details. To a layman a symphony orchestra is an ensemble. To a great conductor or an orchestra is an ensemble of instruments everyone of which he hears and follows with intense interest and care. The greater the conductor the greater is his knowledge of the individual instrument and the more attention he gives to the maximum development of each individual part. It is the same through human experience. The further up the scale in character we go the more we find increasing understanding of significant details. So it's with God. We matter to God not in spite of the fact that He is infinitely great, but because of the fact that in His infinite greatness He can embrace and appreciate not only the great masses of His creation but also its smallest and most precious detail.

Furthermore, to a God like that human beings WOULD matter. It is not merely a possibility; it is virtually a necessity. A man never loses interest in that in which he invests something of himself. Only the unnatural father loses interest in his children and only the careless workman loses interest in the products of his craftsmanship. If God is Mind and Love, He has invested something of Himself in every leaf and star, but certainly it is not presuming too much to say that He has invested more of Himself in man than in any other part of His creation known to us. The very fact that our life is derived from Him, that our thoughts are learned from Him, that our love is caught from Him should be a pledge of His interest in us. We in whom God has invested so much of Himself surely cannot be beyond the range of His intimate knowledge and care.

Finally, to this God human beings DID matter. They mattered so much that He would not leave them to their own folly. He took things in His own hands. He made His love so undeniable and so unrestricted in Jesus that men were brought from death into life. The miracle of His recruiting love has been recurring through twenty centuries. For us it is the conclusive evidence that we matter to Him. We matter so much that He gave His own Son for us that we might have life in Him.

To The Voters Of Martin County

As a candidate for the office of Judge of Recorder's Court of Martin County, I wish to solicit the support of the Democratic voters in the coming primary. My friends, including lawyers, have called to my attention the fact that many of the best recorders in the state are not lawyers and that the principal duty in the trial of cases coming before this court is a matter which, in the higher courts, is the duty of the jury. I shall appreciate any support I may receive and if elected promise to diligently try to justify all confidence reposed in me by being fair, just and impartial to all.

For a Man with a job to do!

The transportation of war workers and fighting men is a vital job. It is one which strains our facilities. These workers, these service men, have a job to do—the winning of this war. Their fast and comfortable transportation is imperative. You, whose job will permit, can help move them swiftly and comfortably to their appointed tasks by giving them your seat on week-ends and doing your traveling during the middle of the week for the duration.

You will find travel during the middle of the week less crowded and schedules faster. Make your next trip on Tuesday or Wednesday.
