HINTS FOR HOMEMAKERS

By Irene James, Home Service Director, Virginia Electric And Power Company

Food preservation takes on a new and more serious meaning this year. We hear "Food for Victory" slogans on every side, and Secretary of Agriculture Wickard says, "Food will win the war."

Many persons who have never before had gardens are busily setting out rows of vegetables to produce food for the summer and the coming winter.

In planning the supply of canned foods needed for the individual family this year, there are several factors to be considered. One is adequate supply of jars, and another is the rationing of sugar, but no homemaker should be discouraged because of these.

The ancient method of drying foods can take care of many items satisfactorily leaving jars for the all-important tomato and other foods that do not dry satisfactorily. Tomatoes are important because of their generous supply of Vitamin C. Because of their high water content, tomatoes would be difficult to dry, so they get the first demand on jars.

Grow enough tomatoes to serve them four times a week during the entire year. This means at least eight or nine months of using the canned product, so be generous with the jars for tomatoes.

The most successful method of canning tomatoes is the cold pack method which is briefly, as follows: Wash, scald in boiling water, and skin tomatoes. Pack in jars, pressing down gently until jars are full of tomatoes and juice. Add one teaspoon of salt to each quart. Process in boiling water 35 minutes.

Drying is a very satisfactory way of preserving many fruits and vegetables. The purpose is to remove enough moisture to keep the food from spoiling. Drying is simple and easy and requires very simple and inexpensive equipment. It is quite satisfactory for corn, peas, beans and greens, and such fruits as apples, cherries, peaches and pears. The vegetables are precooked, just as for any other type of preservation. This partially shrinks the vegetable, helps preserve the color, and destroys any organism which might be present. Dip vegetables out of water, spread in a single layer on a drying rack, dry until no more moisture can be pressed from vegetables. Racks may be easily made from inexpensive wood frames and screening. The food may be dried in the sun, in a warming oven, and in an electric oven. Circulation of air around the food dries it out more quickly.

Let's not worry about sugar! We can satisfactorily without great quantities of sugar. What about preserves, jellies, and jams, we hear? For the food value these furnish in comparison with the amount of sugar needed to make them, we would be selfish and unpatriotic to stock our shelves with jams, jellies and preserves.

It is possible to can fruits retaining their vitamins and minerals and natural sugars. It is minerals and vitamins, not sugar, that satisfy the hidden hunger which is the only difference between the well-nourished and the under-nourished. Canned fruits may have sugar added for serving; our regular ration will take care of that. Fruit is needed to help keep the family fit. Now, keeping fit is the duty of every patriotic American.

Fruit may be canned with honey and corn sirups, of which there are many on the market. Light, mild-flavored, strained honey can be used. It changes the color and flavor of the fruit—a change pleasing to those who enjoy honey.

To make sirup for canning with sugar substitute, a simple rule is to use equal parts honey and water for acid fruits, and one part honey to two parts water for less acid fruits. Boil the water and honey together two minutes. Simmer prepared fruits in the sirup until heated through. Pack in jars and process.

To can with corn sirup, make canning sirup by boiling equal parts corn sirup and water together three minutes. Corn sirup is less sweet than granulated sugar, and the proportion of sirup to water may be varied to meet individual preferences.

New regulations from the Office of Price Administration allows one pound of sugar for canning each four quarts of finished fruit. This will allow generous supplies of nutritious and tasty canned fruits in our pantries.

So let's get busy and preserve all seasonal abundances of fruits and

Special NOTICE To Our Customers

To save precious rubber for the war effort, the Director of Defense Transportation issued a general order to service industries which says:

- 1—We cannot make more than one stop at each customer's residence in any one day. This means . . . to pick up your laundry, your bundle must be ready and available when we call. To deliver your laundry, WE MUST MAKE COLLECTIONS AT THE TIME OF DELIVERY. If these rules are not complied with, we must postpone the delivery or pickup of your laundry until the following day.
- 2—Through a special governmental order we must reduce our truck mileage 25 per cent each month below what it was the same month last year.
- 3—Charge account regulations issued May 5, 1942, by the Federal Reserve Board require that charge accounts must be paid in full by the 10th day of the second month following purchase. Under this requirement, the balance of your account at the end of May, 1942, should be remitted in full not later than July 10, 1942, in order to permit further charges to your account after that date.

We've already asked your cooperation to help us save trucks and tires, in anticipation of the passage of this delivery curtailment ruling. NOW THAT IT HAS BECOME A GOVERNMENT ORDER, we must comply with it.

The inconvenience caused by this order will mean a sacrifice to both of us. But we feel that it is a SMALL SACRIFICE, because it will enable us to CONTINUE SERVING YOU, and at the same time HELP OUR NATION IN ITS EFFORT TO WIN THE WAR.

These Rules Will Go Into Effect July First

NO EXCEPTIONS TO THESE RULES WILL BE MADE.
