State College Hints For Farm Homes

By RUTH CURRENT
State Home Demonstration Agent
All rural women are urged to recognize the coming shortage in doctors' and nursing services and to be prepared to meet the situation by taking courses in home nursing and first aid through the various organizations offering such training. Rural communities already are seriously underserved.

The homemaker's first "Victory Job" is to keep her family well. Good food in variety, well prepared (not overcooked), vegetables (some raw) with fruits, milk, butter, eggs, meats and served in an appetizing way will go a long way toward keeping the family well. Good food does make a difference.

Save nails, screws and bolts. Wire nails are on the scarce list today. Every nail should be salvaged in boards and boxes, for the farm work shop. The kitchen may have a nail box, too. Partitions to sort sizes will be helpful and save time in not having to hunt the right size when you are in a hurry. To avoid rust, or check it, give nails, screws, and bolts an oil bath before you store them.

And strong should be saved for the materials from which string is made are becoming scarcer every day. It's no laughing matter now to copy grandmother and have a string-saving box. Roll up each little piece neatly and tie it so you can get to it easily when you need string.

The family button box, seldom seen now, should come into sight again. Look over all old garments and carefully cut the buttons off. Sort white from dark or colored buttons. Buckles and snaps, hooks and eyes and other fastenings should be saved.

Bread Plays A Vital Role In Human Diet

Bread is the universal food. It enters into the diet of more people than does any other single food item, with the possible exception of rice, says Dr. Walter J. Peterson, in charge of animal nutrition for the N. C. Agricultural Experiment Station at State College. For millions of people, bread is the chief constituent of the diet, owing perhaps to its cheapness and high caloric value.

"That is why," says Dr. Peterson, "the recent enrichment of white flour with Vitamin B1 and calcium is so important to the health of the American people in war-time. Also, the British Food Control Commission has ruled that all white bread used in England must be enriched."

Dr. Peterson explained that Vitamin B1 is composed of a substance known as "thiamin." He said: "Thiamin is concerned with the breakdown of foods that furnish energy for the body processes. Furthermore, since it has been shown that the daily requirement of this vitamin depends upon the amount of energy expended, it is imperative that the inclusion of thiamin in adequate amounts in the diet of our people be assured."

"Food processors in the United States have long sought to please our palates without much consideration for our vitamin needs," the State College nutritionist asserted. "We have acquired a taste for many vitamin-deficient foods."

"Since it is unlikely that we will ever be able to successfully educate the public taste to a point where unprocessed foods would be really enjoyed, it is time that more serious consideration be given to the thought of fortifying our processed foods. This can be accomplished, in most cases, by slight changes in manufacturing methods, such as the enrichment of bread."

Ample Grazing Aids Nation's Food Effort

Providing ample fall, winter and spring grazing for livestock and poultry is one of the principal steps in speeding up the Nation's wartime drive for more food products, says F. H. Smith, agronomist of the Agricultural Experiment Station at N. C. State College.

Young tender forage plants, he explained, make an ideal supplement for the regular dry feeding of this time of the year. The forage provides an appetizing succulent feed, rich in high quality proteins, vitamins and minerals.

The exercise afforded and the exposure to sunshine while grazing further helps the values of the green feed and aids in keeping the animals and birds in thrifty condition. Milk and eggs are improved in quality and increased in quantity when cows and hens have good grazing.

Smith explained that it is economical to provide grazing for livestock and poultry because they harvest this high quality feed themselves. This means a saving in labor to the farmer. Other savings are secured by more efficient use of the regular ration.

For example, the agronomist stated, swine require less grain and high quality protein when on pasture, and hens produce eggs five to ten per cent cheaper when they have ample grazing.

Crops suitable for fall, winter and spring grazing are oats, barley, Italian rye grass, Abruzzi rye, crimson clover, hairy vetch, and rape. The crop chosen should be one known to do well under local conditions.

County agents will aid growers in selecting such crops and advise them as to proper cultivation and fertilization practices.

The steel in one hand cornsheller will make three 6-inch shells.
