pan aims "to free the Asiatics from the white man's yoke." Divide and conquer. Make the war in the East into a struggle of white men against Asiatics. Break the alliance between China and the United States—and let Japan emerge the victor.

A different approach must be used in the East Indies, however, where part of the population is Dutch. So, the Dutch are told that Japan is not hostile to all white men, but only to Anglo-Saxons. Divide and conquer. Separate the white Dutch from white Americans and white Englishmen—and let Japan emerge the victor.

To the natives of the East Indies the Japanese sing a different tune, and the words to it are these:—The Dutch are "aggressors from whom the native populations will be liberated under Japan's guidance." Divide and conquer. Separate Asiatics from non-Asiatics and white Dutchmen from white Americans.

But the Japanese don't stop there. They endeavor also to arouse enmity between the Siamese and the Burmese, between the Siamese and the Chinese, between the Javanese and the Chinese who live in the East Indies. This is the method of "divide and conquer"—arousing suspicion and hate between people so that they cannot unite in their common defense against a common foe.

The enemy thought that his method of confusion and hate would work in America. He tried it here. He spent millions of dollars to make it produce results in America. He counted on dividing Americans into hostile groups full of suspicion and hate for each other—Gentile against Jew, Catholic against Protestant, worker against employer. But the enemy didn't know America. He did know that for generations we have been breaking down the walls of suspicion and hate which separate men in order to create something new in the earth and something noble—a new nation, built not upon liberty only, but upon "liberty and union, one and inseparable, now and forever."

Individual Resourcefulness

Resting on the oars and enjoying comforts and luxuries in an unbroken stream at the expense of the ingenuity of others, mass production and the labors of others for some years, we are going to find the task difficult, but before this war is ended and peace and saneness are restored to the world we'll have to snap out of our dependent state and declare our own individual resourcefulness.

The first thing we'll have to do will be to do without many things. But that'll be no sacrifice; in fact, it will be a privilege to do without some of the things so many people have never had. And it'll be no sacrifice compared with the trials and tribulations experienced by those who are carrying the banner into battle and those who are experiencing starvation and want in the wake of battle.

Then we'll have to change our schedule of living. Instead of buying fat back from the western packers maybe we'll bargain with a farmer right here at home for a piece of pig-tail pork.

The supply of oil is about out and there is much talk about converting oil burners into coal burners. What this section should recognize now is that there'll likely be a coal shortage ere long, and it will be advisable not to buy a coal stove but go to a solid bottom and get a regular old-timey wood-burner. It is quite certain that we are going to do more living at home than ever before, and those of us who participate in the change may, in time, go hungry and cold right here in the midst of plenty. And we haven't even mentioned the vast changes that limited gas allotments and the shortage of tires will bring. Then there are basic changes in our entire economy certainly to be reckoned with sooner or later. The sooner we reckon with them and the harder we work to adjust ourselves to those changes, the better it will be for all of us.

Spare Your Doctor

Some timely advice in these days has been offered, as follows:

War's drain on the nation's doctors continues to grow rapidly. In time, it is likely that all physically fit younger doctors, and many older doctors, will be called to military service. And so, the burden of work on the doctors who remain at home will be doubled and redoubled.

Many authorities are now advising the public as to how it may help these doctors perform their job with maximum efficiency under difficult conditions. First, don't ask your doctor to make a house call if you are able to go to his office. Second, don't call him at inconvenient times unless there is an emergency. Third, when you do see him, don't waste his time in gossip and idle talk. It may be all right to "visit" with the doctor in normal times—it is definitely a bad practice now.

The standards of American medical care are the highest in the world. During the war, with millions of people working at arduous labor, every possible means of guarding and maintaining these standards must be used. And you can be certain that the doctors will do their part. They will willingly work longer and harder. They won't spare themselves. They know better than anyone else that the preservation of civilian health is absolutely vital to the war effort.

The patient who wastes a doctor's time may, unwittingly, be depriving a person who desperately needs it, of medical attention. Spare your doctor.

Aid To Service Men's Dependents

Now that there is much talk about married men being called into the armed services, some few are asking what will become of the dependents. According to a report in the Congressional Record of current issue, the class A dependents will receive the following amounts monthly: wife, $50; wife and one child, $62; wife and two children, $72. Class B dependents will receive the following amounts monthly, one parent, $37; two parents, $47; one parent and two brothers or sisters, $47. In case there is a Class A dependent and class B dependents, the class B will receive the following amounts: one parent, $20; two parents, $30; one parent and one sister or brother, $25; one parent and two brothers or sisters, $30.

In the first two categories, the service man pays $22 and the government the remainder. In the last group, the service man pays only $5.

Conversion

Before the passing of another six or eight months, it is estimated that sixty millions persons will have changed from their normal course in life and be connected more or less directly with the war effort. There has been much complaining on the home front already, but by next May we'll possibly see a change in fairly advanced form that will make the changes to date look small and appear inconsequential.

We should remember that the change is to come as a means to an end, a definite goal, and that while it will certainly be accompanied by difficulties, hardships and even sacrifices, it will be far better to accept the change than to steer our present course and gamble with an uncertain fate.

Some of us will possibly have to go to work. And that will be shocking and down-right bad. But it will be much better to work with hope than it will be to enjoy ourselves for a few fleeting days and reap an uncertain fate for an indefinite time.

Conversion of industry is well advanced after an admittedly slow start. We must now carry the conversion program to our way of life, our outlook on life and our thoughts.

We Must Not Hate

We must not hate. The hour is too momentous, the danger too near. We cannot afford to indulge in the drug of hatred—in the virus of anger. The lives of all of us, our entire way of life, depend upon our self-control.

Hate is the weapon of the enemy. They stirred their own people to aggression by feeding them upon hate. They have conquered nations not merely by force of arms, but by first breaking them open to attack through the stirring up of hatreds of class against class, race against race, religion against religion. We must not let this poison gas of division and disunity lay waste our nation.

We must fight the enemy with every bit of strength we possess—both material and spiritual—in order to achieve the ultimate Victory and eradicate the system we despise. We must not sap this strength with hatred of each other. As one of our leading editorial writers so trenchantly said—"It is mathematical—bloodily and deathly mathematical—that the more energy we squander in fighting one another, the less energy we shall have to fight our enemies."

In the Bill of Rights, promulgated one hundred and fifty years ago; in the Four Freedoms from the President's Message to Congress in January 1942 lies the hope of the world. These are not declarations of hate. There is no mention made of race or creed or color. There is no mention of nationality or class. These are pledges for all the nations, all the people of all the world.

No nation was ever great because of its hatred. Nothing big was ever created out of anger. To say we must not hate is not a doctrine of pacifism. We must fight the evil wherever it exists, and fight to the bitter end, if needs be. But—if we are fighting on God's side, to use Joe Louis' great phrase, we must fight for the right. We must not be confused by the red mist of anger toward our opponent. We must stand firm on God's side—and we must not hate.

Divide And Conquer

From The Common Defense.

America is a nation of many races, many religions. Out of human differences we have sought to build a nation of friends. Out of the same kind of human differences our enemies in this war are seeking to create a society of slaves united only in a common servitude.

Our enemies have a method for doing this. It is called, "divide and conquer." But what is "divide and conquer"? It is only making people suspicious of each other; making them hate each other. Then they cannot unite as friends against a common foe. That's all there is to "divide and conquer."

The Nazis have used this method for a long time. The Japanese, no less, are using it now. "Asia for the Asiatics" is one of their propaganda slogans, and a variation of it is that Ja-
