

State College Hints For Farm Homes

By RUTH CURRENT

If you take the right care of the fats you save, you can use them in lots of ways in your regular cooking. Drippings, for instance, can be used for gravies, as flavorful seasonings for vegetables, in salad dressings, and even for baking if you clarify the fat first.

Clarify means to wash out objectionable odors, tastes, or colors. To do this, use twice as much water as fat and boil for 10 minutes. Stir the mixture well and then leave it to cool. In the case of soft fat, finish cooling in the refrigerator. The fat should from a solid cake. Lift off this layer of caked fat and scrape off any dark material from the underside. Then store the fat. (You can remelt it and pour into a satisfactory container.)

Remember, clarified fats don't keep as well as other fats, so use them quickly.

To keep fats in good condition, you have to store them well. Put them in clean containers with tight fitting covers and store in a cool, dark place. Check up once in a while to make sure they're not rancid. And be sure not to pour new fat in with the rancid fat.

Some fats have to be rendered and by that we mean melted down. To render any raw fat such as suet and fats from poultry, pork and lamb, you heat it until it melts. This separates the fat from the connective tissue. Poultry fat is naturally soft so you don't have to cut it before rendering, but other fats melt quicker if you either grind or cut them into small pieces first.

You can render a small amount of fat in a double boiler over hot water. Cover it and stir occasionally. As soon as the fat is melted strain it into a container that has a tight cover. When the fat is cold, store it.

Back of the North Carolina Committee's "Clean Up or Close Up" Campaign is the sincere desire to make the state a better place to live in.

This Campaign reflects the demand of an overwhelming majority of beer dealers that their business be freed, and freed 100%, of any taint attached to it by the activities of even a few law violators.

State Health Head Endorses Plans to Draft Syphilitics

Reynolds Says It's Not Fair For Youth and Married Men to Shield Them

Raleigh—Major-General Lewis B. Hershey's announcement that men who have been rejected because of positive syphilis tests will be absorbed by the Army did not come any too soon," Dr. Carl V. Reynolds, State Health Officer, declared.

"Reports compiled by the United States Public Health Service show that out of the first 1,000,000 men examined for selective service 47,552 were rejected because they had syphilis. Major-General Hershey's announcement that these will be re-considered and some of them taken into the Army was accompanied by the statement that within three months the 4,500,000-man goal advocated in June by Army Staff General George C. Marshall will have been realized.

"Basing estimates on rejections among the first 1,000,000 men, this means there will be a total of 213,984 rejected syphilitics taking refuge behind our 18 and 19-year-old boys and married men with dependent children and those whose wives are incapable of earning a living.

"This ought not to be. Why should a boy in college have to go to take the place of a syphilitic who can and ought to be inducted, given treatment, put in a position within a short time where he can carry on as a soldier and ultimately cured? Why should the father of dependent children or the husband of a wife who is not gainfully employed be used as a shield for a syphilitic? Those who are suffering with syphilis in its primary or secondary stage are not the victims of a degenerative disease but one that can be cured.

"Why, then, should these selectees be returned to the public to infect others in civilian life for lack of control when, in my opinion, they should be inducted, separated if necessary and treated until cured and placed in the ranks? For it to be otherwise is a penalty on those who are free from this disease and who must go in their stead.

"Selectees who are carriers of syphilis and rejected by the army return to their former employment and many are neither hospitalized nor treated. The boy who replaces any one of these might be your son; and when these syphilitics are put back into circulation, you and yours come into contact with them. Why should not they be treated by the Army and made to fight?

"For selective service officials to continue to permit this condition would be an indication of a selfish policy and a sad commentary on the word 'selective' when we think of drafting young men 18 and 19 years old, who ought to be in a state of preparation for the duties that will follow the war.

"We are told that even married men with dependent children will have to be drafted by the last quarter of 1943. Would it not be the part of the Army, War Relocation Authority, Water Safety and Accident Prevention Service.

This number was as great as those certified in the preceding 31 years, the report said. This record-breaking training program of the fiscal year ending June 30 brought to 6,650,228 the number of persons to whom Red Cross First Aid certificates have been issued.

of wisdom to take first the syphilitic who can be cured?

"Curing syphilis is not nearly as expensive as having to support dependent families. For the Army to treat and rehabilitate these men, many of whom, perhaps, would rather go on suffering with syphilis than to fight, would release just that much money, time, effort and equipment for treating those in civilian life who are not eligible for military service. One new method of treatment has been developed which, it is claimed, can cure syphilis in its first stages within eight weeks.

"Syphilis should no longer be allowed to remain an asset to those who have it by giving them immunity at a time when the nation is so sorely in need of manpower."

IN MEMORIAM

In loving remembrance of my dear father, James Rueben Keel, who departed from this life one year ago today, September 28, 1941.

"Twas so hard to see you leave us. 'Twas so hard to see you die. How you suffered without a murmur. How you suffered without a sigh. With patience you bore your infirmity. 'Til God took you home that day. To be with him forever in eternity. We so greatly miss your going away. You live with us in memory. A happy home we once enjoyed. How sweet that memory still. But death has left a vacant chair. That none can ever fill. The old home now is broken. Your face in memory still roams. For the hands that rest forever. Were the hands that made our home. Some may think you are forgotten. Though on earth you are no more. But in memory you still are with us. As you always were before.

J. W. Keel and Family.

Congressman Cannon Tells Who the Farm Bureau Speaks For

"Congressional Record—Pages 2076 and 2077, March 6, 1942, by Clarence Cannon—30 years Member of Congress from Missouri and Chairman of Powerful House Appropriations Committee."

Discussing the agricultural items in the Appropriations Bill last Friday, Congressman Hook of Michigan made the following statement: "The American Farm Bureau Federation does not represent the dirt farmer of America."

The statement was challenged by Congressman Clarence Cannon in an able speech in which he said, among other things: "I know intimately the membership of the Farm Bureau throughout my district . . . It is made up exclusively of average farmers . . .

"Mr. Chairman, I can tell you who the Farm Bureau represents. And I do not speak from hearsay. It represents the tenant farmer. The tenant farmers make up a large part of the membership of any Farm Bureau you can name anywhere in the nation. It represents the farmer with a mortgage on his farm . . . The Farm Bureau represents the farmer whose wife works at farm tasks from dawn till dusk and whose children must do a large part of the work for which the farmer is unable to provide hired labor. Mr. Chairman, there are no more enthusiastic members of the Farm Bureau than the farmers' wives, because they realize better than anyone else what the Farm Bureau has done to alleviate the lot of the women and children on the American farm.

"Mr. Chairman, what does the gentleman who makes this assertion know about the Farm Bureau? He has never lived on a farm since he was born. He has never attended a meeting of the Farm Bureau in his life.

"Mr. Chairman, why this sudden, sporadic criticism of the Farm Bureau this morning? The answer is simple. The Farm Bureau is getting results; It is not only representing the small farmer, but it is representing him effectively. It is securing a decent price for his products. It is securing a living wage for his labor. It is at last giving him parity with those who for years have been living at his expense.

"Who secured the enactment of parity payments and appropriations to make them effective? The Farm Bureau. Ed O'Neal personally solicited and secured the last 12 votes needed after those in charge of the bill had given up hope. I know, because I was in charge of the bill at the time. Not another farm leader—not another farm organization lifted a finger to put over that legislation. * * *

"Who secured the legislation guaranteeing the farmer 85 per cent of parity. Ask Senator Bankhead of Alabama, who led the remarkable battle for that legislation, and he will tell you that without Ed O'Neal and the Farm Bureau it could not have been passed.

"Every farmer in the United States who received a parity check is under obligation to the Farm Bureau for that check. Ed O'Neal and the Farm Bureau handed it to him—only a small part of what he had actually earned, but that much on account. Who was the Farm Bureau representing when it secured the enactment of that legislation? It was representing every farmer who got a check—every farmer who got a decent price for his products and a decent wage for his labor.

"Ed O'Neal has rendered a greater service to agriculture and to the country as a whole than many Senators, Governors, Cabinet officers, and Congressmen by the score who object to the Farm Bureau because it has secured legislation under which the farmer cannot be exploited by those who want to take his products away from him at less than the cost of production. God bless him. He will be remembered with gratitude when the vast majority of those in the legislative limelight today are as completely forgotten as the men who lived before the flood."

We have our Membership Drive on in Martin County at the present time. Our goal is 1200 new members. Won't you help fight the battle of Agriculture by giving your membership today?
