

Recommends Wheat For Part Hog Ration

Surplus wheat has been made available through the Commodity Credit Corporation for feeding livestock. Ellis V. Vestal, Extension swine specialist of N. C. State College, says wheat can be substituted for 30 to 50 per cent of the grain ration in feeding hogs.

The Government wheat is being made available in North Carolina at $1.00 per bushel during October. The shortage of corn is acute in some sections of the State, and the CCC distribution of wheat for feed will help farmers reach their meat-production goals in the Food-for-Freedom program.

"Ground wheat is about 10 per cent better than shelled corn," said Vestal, "but the cost of grinding usually increases its cost by 10 per cent. Corn can be fed on the ear or shelled, but wheat should be ground because hogs do not chew it sufficiently when they are hungry."

Vestal also explained that pigs fed wheat have more of a tendency to go "off feed" than do pigs fed corn as the only grain. On the other hand, hogs fed ground wheat and supplements gain 10 per cent faster than pigs fed corn and supplements. Like corn, wheat is deficient in vitamins A and D, as well as ample

The Political Organization Of the New World

This article will deal with the political framework or structure of the new world that is being created before our very eyes; while future stories will deal with the economic and social organization and the racial and cultural character of the world that is now emerging.

Whatever may be the way the new world political order may be set up and administered as to specific details is impossible to say at this moment; of this, however, we are certain: the future destinies of this globe will be controlled and guided by a concord or organized group of nations encompassing the whole surface of the world. Whether this will be called a "League of Nations" or a "World of Nations" little matters. One hundred and fifty years ago 13 sovereign nations or states came together and formed a "United States"; it will thus be a logical historical development if the future union of the world is called "The United Nations" the name by which the present allies arrayed against the Axis call themselves.

League of Nations First Try at World Order

From the American angle at least (or from Wilson's angle, it might more properly be said), the first "World War" was fought not only to make America and the world safe for democracy but also to end all future wars. That we sadly failed in this is beyond the point at this moment; the fact is, the first "World War" gave us the beginnings of a world political structure and exhibited in bold relief the things we must do and not do in any future global political framework. This is the real value of the first world struggle from the political point of view; and in much the same way as the old Articles of Confederation were defective but yet lead the way to a real union of proteins and minerals. Therefore, wheat should be fed with a protein supplement, and minerals and green pasture.

"If wheat and corn are about the same price," said the swine specialist, "a combination of the two (or wheat and barley), fed with a protein supplement, minerals and green pasture, will generally make faster and more economical gains than when either ground wheat or shelled corn are fed as the only grain."

tion called the United States of America, so the League of Nations was defective but led the way to a real United Nations of the World to come. Will There Be Another World Conflict?

This leads to the question concerning whether or not there will ever be another hemispheric or global struggle of the nations of the world. Surely the races, nations and classes will continue to struggle or compete with each other on an economic and social level; the chances now appear to be that there will never be another titanic physical struggle of the nations.

Whether we will ever have another world conflict will depend mainly upon four nations — the United States, the British Empire, Russia and China — and particularly upon the first two named, ourselves and the British. The seeds of a future struggle on a world scale are found in the isolationist individualism of the United States, the historic imperialism and "muddling through" of the British, the communism of the Russians and their resentment over the second front issue and the smug complacency and Asiatic aloofness of the Chinese.

Policing and Controlling The New World

In the past both the British and the Americas, and particularly the United States, have been peace-loving nations, but today before our very eyes we are witnessing a change toward a new type of militaristic outlook on the part of both ourselves and the British, born out of the reluctant realization that the future peace of the world can be maintained first of all only by a military organization sufficiently powerful to promptly squash or repel any threat to the peace of the World Order.

The necessity of military secrecy as well as other reasons, precludes either the British or ourselves admitting that we intend to maintain a large standing military establishment after the present war but I believe this is the clear intention of both the Roosevelt and Churchill administrations. There are, for example, too many tell-tale elements about our present arming and armament program to fool one into thinking that once the war is over we will disarm our armies and return to the old unarmed state and day-dreamy outlook of the past.

This development itself means the introduction in our own society of a new element which has always profoundly influenced the character, the structure and the course of events of other nations wherever this element has been introduced, namely a military caste and the vested interests of the military.

NOTE OF THANKS

We wish to express our deep appreciation to all who were so liberal in their deeds, words, cards, and letters of sympathy, also for the floral tributes during the recent illness and death of our daughter and sister.

A. S. Leggett and Family.

CARD OF THANKS

Since I cannot see each of you in person, I am taking this opportunity for myself and family to express our heartfelt thanks and appreciations to the churches, the VEP Co., the people of Aulander where we made our home, kind doctors and nurses at the hospital, and to all of our individual friends and neighbors everywhere, for your many acts of kindness during the sickness and death of my husband, and also your presence and the beautiful floral offering at his burial. Your kind words of sympathy and your gracious deeds of love will always linger with us.

Mrs. Thos. Manning and Family.

NATURALLY

we kept faith with the South!

Southerners are in the middle of the fight on all the fronts of the world. Wherever our Armed forces go into action, our boys are hanging up records that make us all mighty proud of them.

And here at home too, Southern men and women are carrying on with the same kind of courage and stamina — in defense work, in the shipyards . . . and in building morale.

We in the Atlantic Company, brewers of Good Old Atlantic Ale and Beer, are proud to be numbered among those Southern institutions who are fighting the production problems created by war conditions 24 hours a day.

Faced with shortages of metal for bottle caps, restrictions on deliveries to conserve vital rubber and gasoline, shortage of man power because so many of our men have enlisted in the Army, Navy and Marines, we at the same time must produce more because many of our former competitors have abandoned this market and are now devoting all their efforts to serving their own home communities — and we must fill in the gap.

In pledging ourselves to make every effort humanly possible to insure our customers and trade against any avoidable shortage of Good Old Atlantic Ale and Beer, we are, in our own way, simply doing our bit in the country's war effort, for we recognize that in the strain and tension of the wartime job, there is a real and vital need for the healthy relaxation which comes at the end of the day from a refreshing glass of cold Ale or Beer.
