Counties Are Urged To Make Oil Tests Of Their Soybeans

Several North Carolina counties probably will be able to qualify for a 10 cents per bushel premium on soybeans of one or more varieties on the basis of oil content tests, according to G. T. Scott, chairman of the State AAA Committee, with headquarters at N. C. State College.

Under the soybean-purchase program now being conducted by Commodity Credit Corporation, a premium of 10 cents per bushel is paid on all soybeans of any class having 17 1/2 per cent oil or more. All soybeans produced in North Carolina are considered as having low oil content unless chemical analyses prove otherwise.

The program provides, Scott declared, that tests may be made either on a county-wide basis or by individual producers. If the county-wide tests show high oil content, all soybeans of the class tested will be eligible for purchase at 10 cents per bushel above support prices for the grade. County-wide tests must be made of three samples taken from a composite sample of beans from at least 20 farms, unless there are fewer than 20 farms producing soybeans of that particular variety. Samples must be taken by the County AAA Committee, and a supporting statement certifying that the samples are representative must be submitted to the Corporation before approval for the increased price.

Individual growers having oil tests made of their soybeans must take samples under supervision of the County AAA committee and must pay for the tests. In order to obtain the premium price, producers must present a certification of the tests at the time of sale. Green and yellow soybeans grading No. 2 or better are being purchased at $1.50 per bushel, and brown, black and mixed soybeans grading No. 2 or better are being supported at $1.40 per bushel, delivered to designated buying points or oil mills.

State College Hints For Farm Homes

By RUTH CURRENT
 It has been said that turkey, duck or chicken can have a glossy coat if there's a sprinkling of sugar after the usual rubbing with butter, salt and pepper before roasting. Someone should have thought of that when there was plenty of sugar available but, after all, a little sprinkling won't drain the precious supply, now will it? You may like it.

Cakes made with honey sometimes seem less light and fluffy than those made with sugar. Age them, and they become moist and flavorful.

The coffee you buy now is probably in a paper bag. Think nothing of it. Better be glad you were able to get any at all. It's predicted that by Christmas time all available coffee will be packed in bags. Just transfer it to an old coffee tin or a glass jar with a metal screw top.

The very unfortunate homemaker who "stocks up" will be mighty sorry in a month from now that the coffee tastes as it's been poured through someone's sock. And that's exactly what will happen to hoarders.

Yes coffee goes stale on the shelf and with that thought in mind, these hints should be observed religiously: (1) Buy coffee as your rationing book permits. Don't fuss. (2) Buy the right kind for your coffee maker. The wrong type means needless waste. (3) Measure coffee accurately. (4) Prepare no more than you think you'll need. (5) Serve it as soon as it's made, if possible. (6) Save all leftover coffee. Use in cooking. It is especially delicious in cakes, cookies and pudding. It's called mocha then.

Keep these points in mind for the months ahead and remember that coffee rationing means that everyone will get a share of what there is.

Turkey Raisers In State Are Urged To Keep Breeding Birds

Thanksgiving turkeys have all been marketed, and in many cases eaten. C. F. Parrish, extension poultryman, says that the demand was good, the supply was adequate, and the quality excellent. In most cases, he said, prices were satisfactory to the producers.

"It is to be hoped, however," Parrish said, "that turkey raisers looked ahead to next year when they selected birds for the first holiday market. They should have kept back a sufficient number of quality turkeys for breeders."

"It is not too late to do this," the poultryman added. "Practically every turkey raiser has some younger birds to be fattened for the Christmas market, and from these the breeding birds for 1943 may be selected. There will be a strong demand for turkey poult next year, because of the need for poultry meat to offset rationing of pork, beef, veal, lamb and mutton."

Parrish says that characteristics to look for in choosing breeding birds include: Turkeys that made rapid growth, finished quickly, and show other desirable traits.

"Choose only strong, healthy and vigorous birds," he recommended.

"They should have a broad, full breast bone longer than their shanks. The breeding birds should have wide, long backs, short legs and short necks. The breast, however, is the most important and it should at least equal, and preferably, exceed the shank in length." Parrish said that some reports have been received about turkeys being marketed for the Thanksgiving trade which were not properly finished. He urged that growers withhold from the market all turkeys which are not well finished, fat, and still carrying excessive pin feathers.
