State College Hints For Farm Homes

By RUTH CURRENT
Beans are high in food value and low in cost. There are red kidney beans, pea beans, white narrow beans, yellow-eye beans, white kidney beans, black turtle soup beans, and all the rest.

Eat beans for energy, eat them for economy, eat them for patriotism; but eat them often. North Carolina grows them, almost every kind for almost every purpose.

Appeal! Beans appeal in cost, in convenience of storage, in their variety, and in their keeping quality. They are good in soups, in salads, and in sandwiches.

Nutrients are plentiful in beans. They contain protein for body building, carbohydrate for energy, and many of the vitamins and minerals for general good health and growth.

Serve beans hot; serve them cold; serve them as a main dish for dinner, or as a pick-up for supper. Serve them simply, or attractively garnished and seasoned.

Beans are as American as is apple pie and today it is doubly important to use them because they are low in cost and high in food value. (When combined or served with milk and eggs they may take the place of more costly meats.)

MAJOR

The highest rank attained by a Martin County boy in the Army during the current war was earned last week by Wheeler Martin, Jr., of Williamston.
