Democratic Motto Must Be 'Co-Operation' Says Wilson

In Speech At Shadow Lawn Today--Wilson Day--President Defines The Great Aims Of A Great Party

THE WORK IS BUT BEGUN

No Delay Or Hindrance Must Be Allowed When The World Waits Upon America's Example and Leadership

(By United Press)

Long Branch, N. J., Oct. 28--Today is Wilson Day and Empire State Day at Shadow Lawn.

Thousands of New Yorkers are gathered at the summer white house making the gathering the greatest of the President's porch campaign.

John R. Voorhis and several thousand Tammanyites are here pledging the support of Tammany to the President.

The President's address follows: My Fellow-citizens:

"This is called 'Wilson Day' only because for six years, first as Governor of New Jersey and then as President of the United States, I have been permitted to lead first a great state and then a great national party along the ways of progress and of enlarged and regenerated life which our people had so long sought and so long been held back from by the organized power of selfish interest, and because the great honor has fallen to me of being chosen once more spokesman and representative of the men who mean to hold the country to these ways of peace, humanity and progress. It is of these forces that I shall speak and not of myself, who am merely their servant.

"What are these forces? Whence do they spring? What have they accomplished, and what is their program and purpose for the future? It is plain what they are. They are the forces of humane, righteous, and patriotic purpose which have sprung up in our day in the minds of those who perceive the shortcomings of the law as it has hardened in America and who look forward with purpose and conviction to a new age in which government shall be indeed the servant of liberty and not of privilege. These are men who perceive that American law has not kept pace with American sentiment; that our law has been holding us rigid and immovable, until class has begun, in free America, to be arrayed against class; until what was legal has begun to play a more important part in our thoughts and determinations than what is human and right; and until America has begun to lag instead of lead in reconciling what is with what ought to be.

"A new age had dawned upon us while those who were attempting to lead us were stumbling along with their heads over their shoulders, in content upon preserving the conditions of a day that is gone. America had changed and the whole world had changed. Our commerce and industry had grown to such a bulk that the domestic markets of which our former leaders were always so solicitous were glutted and we were bound, unless we were to burst our jacket, to find a free outlet into the markets of the world. The time had come when our commerce needed freedom and would be throttled by further restraints. We had acquired foreign possessions, had been drawn into the politics of the world, had begun to play a part which could not be played by provincials but must be played by citizens of the great world of nations. And yet we had not altered our policy or our point of view. The great European war has served at least to show us this one thing, that the world itself had changed; that it had become at once too big a world and too little a world to submit its destinies to the hostile rivalries and ambitions now of this and that member of the great family of men; too compact, too intimate in its contacts, too universal in its ways of intercourse, to make it any longer possible to limit the effects of any nation's action to a single, separate sphere where the rest would be untouched. An inevitable partnership of interests have been thrust upon the nations. They are neighbors and must accommodate their interests to one another, or else disturb the lives and embarrass the fortunes of men everywhere. No wonder that in such an age men in America should be cried awake and feel, once more, as they felt them in the days when their great republic was set up, the compulsions of humanity and of justice!

"These are the freshening winds blowing over the life of mankind everywhere, that have brought on a new day in American politics. We have looked once more very critically at our own laws and our own practices and have set about to square them with the actual conditions of our life and the life of the world.

"Four years ago there were two parties in the field whose program was conceived under the influence of these great forces of progress and adjustment, the Democratic party and the Progressive party. This year there is but one, the Democratic party. In the presidential election of four years ago some fifteen million votes were cast. Of these, nearly ten and a half million were cast for the candidates of the two progressive parties, only three and a half millions for the candiparty which lingered in the old ways and felt none of the new impulse of a new day. More than two thirds of the voters of the United States favored then, and favor now, a programme whose object is to serve the changing needs of human life and progress. "The Democratic party was entrusted with the task. These powerful forces of the new age were put under its direction. And under that direction what have they accomplished? They have put both the business and the life of the country upon a new footing. They have released the financial credit, upon which commerce and production alike depend, from the control of small groups of financiers and bankers at the speculative centers. They have released the commerce and industry of the country from the domination of those who were building up their power by selfish and unfair methods of competition. They have supplied those who wish to conduct their business in conformity with the spirit of the law with friendly guidance and delivered them from a nervous fear of the courts. They have released our foreign trade from the shackles of a tariff contrived in the interest of special groups of favored producers, and have created a Tariff Commission intended to substitute public for private influences, facts for theories and pretensions, in all future legislation with regard to duties and restrictions on imports. They have made provision for the immediate and systematic development of our carrying trade on the seas. They have at last supplied the means by which the nation may be bound together, materially and spiritually, by a network of good roads upon which both commodities and competitors may move freely from community to community. They have put the farmer upon a footing of perfect equality with business men and men of all other callings in respect of his access to commercial credit; have placed a great bureau of the Government at his service in seeking and finding his best markets; have protected him by the establishment of definite standards in the sale of his products, and have put the scientific knowledge of the world at his disposal by practical demonstration at the expense of the Government upon the farms themselves. They have emancipated the laborers of the country from the unjustified restraints which the courts had put upon them by mistaken applications of the old law to new circumstances and conditions. They have released the children of the country in large part from hurtful labor; have sought to safeguard the lives and the health of our laborers in dangerous occupations; and have out agencies of the Government itself at the service of those who seek employment. And most of these things have been done within the brief limits of a single administration. "And still the great work is not finished. It can never be rounded off and concluded so long as circumstances change and the fortunes and relations of men shift and alter. The question you have to decide one week from next Tuesday is whether it shall be prematurely interrupted, perhaps for a generation to come, and all the generous forces of the age and of the world thrown back upon themselves in discouragement and confusion. "The programme remaining is as great as the programme accomplished. The procedure of our court

Forget War On Russian Sunday

(By WILLIAM PHILIP SIMMS United Press Staff Correspondent) Imperial Headquarters Russian Army, Oct. 5 (By Mail)--Sunday at the Stovka, or Grand General Headquarters, would make the most keenly imaginative man in the world forget there was ever such a thing as war even if he had not done so already in this quietest and most peaceful of towns. Sunday--our Sunday--is Monday here, and market day. Our Saturday is their Sunday. All Saturday you have heard the rapid peal of bells chiming in several keys from tall chimed towers flecked with red and white, and have attended the most beautiful religious services in the world where, boy-choirs on opposite sides of the high altar chanted the gorgeous ceremonies. So today business is going full blast and the wonderful open air market near the water tower is packed with its people as curiously mixed as the wares one finds offered for sale. The tone is purely Oriental, with the strange bazaars and turbaned, bare-foot women, and not even the electric sirens of American automobiles whose terrific screams penetrate here, can wrench from one's mind all of this effect. Here in this market are people who scarcely realize a war is being fought or that Russia is playing a leading part. The crowd is made up of peasants, mostly, and the poor of the town whose mart this essentially is. The peasants have driven into town with things to sell or exchange. The poor of the town have to come to lay in a supply of those things of which they stand in need. Gendarmes in considerable number keep order and these, in their khaki uniforms, and what little of the accident there may be to the scene. GERMANS SINK NINE VESSELS

IN PROTEST AGAINST NORWAY'S DECREE FORBIDDING SUBMARINES IN HER WATERS

(By United Press) London, Oct. 28--Nine Norwegian vessels were sunk by German submarines during the last twenty-four hours, according to a Christiana dispatch, in the campaign against Norwegian shipping as a protest to Norway's decree refusing the entrance of submarines to her waters.

JAWS ENCLOSING ROUMANIA Both jaws of the great Teutonic vice are closing in upon Roumania. Striking southward with two columns Field Marshall Von Falkenhayn's Austro-German army threatens the capture of the railway towns Sinala and Campolung. Mackensen is rapidly clearing the defeated Russians and Rumanians from the province of Dobrudja.

BRILLIANT ATTACK ON VERDUN FRONT The French stormed and captured Quarrey, in a brilliant attack on the northeast Verdun front last night. Intermittent cannonading continues on the Somme front.

Novel Features Wild West Show

Many novel features are promised from the Buffalo Bill-101 Ranch Wild West Show, which Elizabeth City is to see for two performances Friday, November 10th. Push-ball, with contestants afoot and on horseback, is strongly featured this year, a fact which is said to be justified by the rough-and-tumble character of this exciting contest. The Indians, who are led by the noted Chief Flying Hawk, are, it is announced, more picturesquely and effectively employed than in other years. All the Indian brave are utilized in the attack on the pioneers' camp; they give a genuine buffalo hunt, and they illustrate their native ghost, white-dog, green corn and other aboriginal dances. In the stake-throw hold-up, as well as in the reproduction of the attack on Columbus, N. M., there are Mexican vaqueros and soldiers, both Villalistas and Carranzalistas, and they give an interesting color to the lively picture. A troop of Cosacks, with their small ponies and high saddles, interestingly contrast the method of riding in vogue in the Russian Caucasus and the Western plains. The announcement is made that Col. Wm. F. Eddy, (Buffalo Bill) will be in the saddle at both performances and will actively participate in the great military spectacle. "Preparedness," which is this season's biggest feature, as well as in the preliminary free street parade which takes place at 10:30 on the morning of show day! Register Now!
