"Nags Head is calling you," says an advertisement. We hear the call, all right, old friend, but we have to keep sawing wood, thank you.

Isn't it awful that ever since that State Board of Health boll weevil story you feel like you're chewing up boll weevils when you crunch a juicy blackberry?

Those who enjoyed the Shelby fight service given by this newspaper should thank Manager Sykes of the Western Union as well as The Advance for it. Mr. Sykes stayed on the job until 8 o'clock, or two hours beyond his regular holiday hours in order that The Advance might get the news and in order that Elizabeth City fight fans need not 'phone to Norfolk for it.

Dr. Dixon Carroll told the summer school teacher-students at Raleigh recently that modern girls are much like those of 1776, after all. Which is convincing, for Dr. Carroll herself was a pioneer as a woman physician in the South, and knows what it takes of work and courage to succeed in the face of difficulty. Her knowledge of womankind is real, and her sympathy for her sex has been practically demonstrated by what she has done to make Samaritans, that refuge for those who have stepped too far beyond the pale, a reality.

Making Mountains Out of Mole Hills

Half the time everybody gets wrought up over things that are of little importance in themselves and whose significance they immensely overrate.

When the late J. P. Caldwell began editing the Charlotte Observer along independent and newer lines back in the nineties, John R. Webster, the editor of Webster's Weekly, filled about every one of his papers with articles intended to keep things straight and to show Mr. Caldwell the error of his way. At first the Observer argued a little but stopped when it found the controversy interminable. Then the Weekly came out along about the Fourth of July with a three column editorial giving Mr. Caldwell hail Columbia. The only reply that Mr. Caldwell made was something like this:

"We see that Webster's Weekly had three columns about the sins of the Observer, which we haven't time to read now. In the fall when the weather is cooler we may read it and make some kind of a reply."

When people cannot agree they ought to quit and let it go at that. The News esteems itself somewhat of a friend to both Tom Bost and the Governor, but we wish they would quit. Their mutual antipathies are not public matters at all, and it will all end just where it started, mutual dislike. The Governor can't please Tom and Tom can't please the Governor, and that's about all there is to it.—Goldsboro News.

Little Plant Makes A Thriving Industry

Candelilla Grows Wild Near Mexican Border And Looks Like a Mere Weed

Alpine, Texas, July 7.—The Candelilla plant, little known away from the Mexican border, and growing wild, is being made the source of large money returns. The business of extracting wax from the plant is expanding and now large shipments are made to England and other foreign countries.

The plant, a shrub about four feet high, resembles a weed, and has never been cultivated to any extent. The stem is round and waxy, and it is estimated five tons of the plant grow to an acre. The yield of wax is from 3 to 3 1/2 per cent, and sells for about 27 cents a pound.

Factories for refining the wax have large vats of boiling water. The plant is dumped into the vats, sulphuric acid is added, and in time the wax frees itself, rises to the top of the liquid and is skimmed off. Wax ready for market is flinty, and is broken into small pieces and shipped in sacks. It is used as a base for varnish, fillers, floor polishes, tacking machine records and waterproofing materials.

When all the wax has been extracted the fiber remaining is pitched from the vats with large forks, allowed to dry and then burned as fuel under the factory boilers.

As the plant grows wild, requiring no cultivation, the cost of the shrub is small. Mexican laborers usually gather it. The factories operate the year round, and the demand for wax is said to be greater than the supply. Its manufacture is coming to be one of the recognized border industries.

"WORSE THAN PAIN"

Louisiana Lady Says She Has "Never Found Anything Better Than Cardui for a Run-Down Condition."

Morgan City, La.—"It would be hard for me to tell how much benefit I have derived from the use of Cardui," said Mrs. I. G. Bowman, of 1319 Front Street, this city.

"I was so run-down in health I could hardly go. I was thin, I had no appetite. Could not rest or sleep well. I was so weak, and so very nervous, I was no pleasure to myself.

"I suffered some pain, but the worst of my trouble was from being so weak and easy to get tired and out of heart. "This nervous condition was worse than pain.

"Some one told me of Cardui, and decided to use it.

"After using a few bottles, I regained my strength. I wasn't so nervous, began to eat and sleep, and grew stronger and was soon well.

"I have never found anything better for a run-down condition." If you suffer as this Louisiana lady did, you, too, should find Cardui helpful for your troubles.
