The Golden Autumn

Now that the rain is over and gone and the sun is back again on his job, The Advance rises to remark that the most delightful picnicking season of the year in this good section is now on.

Many Advance readers may have the idea on reading the foregoing sentence that the editor is out of his head. Folks generally think that the picnicking season ends with summer; but, really, that is a gross delusion. The most delicious picnicking days of the year occur in late October and early November—days when it's chilly and perhaps a bit gloomy in the house but when all the out of door's world warms up under a kindly and not too ardent sun.

This doesn't mean the languid and hazy Indian summer of the very late fall or sometimes even of the early winter. It means crisp and vigorous and seasonable autumn weather when the air is crystal clear and when the oscillation between warm noons and cold nights makes you think of the mountains.

Picnickers in the autumn tide, however, should be vigorous and carefree, afraid neither of rheumatism nor of sunburn. They should also be unafraid of burrs and all manner of adherent weeds that the thrifty seeds furnish with ingenious means of attachment to the tails of cows and the clothes of those who care to go a-gypsysing in October. The older the clothes the better; and for the men folks leather leggings are handier than either trousers or golf stockings.

It is also important that the picnickers should be free from the obligation of a mid-day Sunday dinner and an afternoon Sunday joy ride and all other barbarities. The best hours for our picnic will be from 12 to 4 when the sun is strongest. After 4, a zephyr is liable to spring up and chill one's well-warmed hide.

A successful October picnic requires an especially suitable spot. It should be a clear space exposed to the sun during the hours specified in the foregoing paragraph; and yet it should be contiguous to shade, in case the sun should wax too hot.

The beauty of wood, field and stream is beyond that of any other part of the year in late October.

Norfolk Is Next

An interesting study is presented in today's story by Robert T. Small of the amazing growth of New York City, which, if the present rate of increase were maintained, would become a city of 28,000,000 souls by the year 2000.

But The Advance does not believe that the present rate of increase will be maintained. Some other city must take over the overflow that crowds the limits of the world's greatest metropolis.

In all probability the Atlantic seaport that has most to gain from the congested condition of transportation, both of freight and of passengers, in New York is Norfolk.

More Laurels

We see by the up-state newspapers that Miss Catherine Albertson of Elizabeth City, but with offices for the time being in the North Carolina College for Women at Greensboro, is featured frequently on the program of teacher and parent-teacher meetings as a speaker.

Miss Albertson has already won laurels as a teacher and a writer, and The Advance has no doubt that she will make a reputation equally as enviable on the platform.

When we glance through the advertising columns of a North Carolina daily newspaper and see a lady's oxford priced at $16.50 we know that they lie who say that the war was fought in vain.

Wake Forest alumni in these parts have a new glint in their eyes since reading in the newspapers that old W. F. C. is the most likely runner-up in the contest for the State football championship.

Let's hurry up with this race between Zev and My Own and have this talk as to which is the faster horse done with.

Trouble is that folks who are for a third party ain't for Ford.

Wild Buffalo Find A Haven In Canada

Boundaries Of Game Preserve Dedicated As Their Wilderness Home

Ottawa, Ont., Oct. 25.—Boundaries of a new wild game preserve in northern Alberta dedicated in perpetuity as the wilderness home of two herds of 1,500 wild wood buffalo, have just been announced by the Dominion government.

The entire habitat of the two herds has been enclosed in the sanctuary. It is heavily timbered and includes several mountain ranges, lakes and rivers. The area of the new park is 10,500 square miles. Throughout the park cabins have been built for wardens which will facilitate an efficient patrol service the year round.

Existence of these wild herds in the Great Slave Lake country has been vaguely known for years, but their numbers were never estimated above 250 until a year ago when a government survey party saw the herds and by rough count figured the total as 1,500 animals. The only other known herd of wild buffalo in the world is in the remote fastnesses of Yellowstone park and numbers not more than 100 animals.

With the largest number of wild buffalo, Canada boasts also the largest park at Wainwright, the largest game preserve under fence in the world. The Wainwright herd now numbers more than 8,000. Two thousand bulls on the Wainwright range will be slaughtered this fall as of no value to herd propagation and to conserve pasturage. Their meat will be marketed in the United States and Canada and a large part of it made into pemmican for distribution among Arctic trading and fur posts.

Here Come The Elephants

DO you remember how you used to be on the job bright and early to see the circus parade? Remember how you thrilled as the lions, tigers, and the big, lumbering elephants passed in review? How the horses, the blare of the bands, the antics of the clowns, and the glitter of it all inspired you with a fervid determination to see the real show—the big performance in the tent?

You didn't realize it then, but you were getting a lot out of an attractive advertisement.

Perhaps you don't realize it now, but other advertisements, just as attractive, just as interesting and far more valuable to you, parade daily before you in the columns of this paper.

The merchants and makers of everything you want or need, here display before you their most attractive wares. It is truly "the greatest show on earth."

The whole purpose of any advertisement is to excite your curiosity, gain your interest, arouse your desire; to tell you something you don't know; to remind you of something you have forgotten; to convince you of something over which you have been hesitating.

In short, the purpose of an advertisement is, in one way or another, to make you happier.
