Cooke Family Reunion
For more than thirty years, since the first boy left home and launched out in the world for better or worse, the sons and daughters of the late R. A. Cooke of Aulander, Bertie County, have met in annual reunion. As long as their father lived, who survived their mother a number of years, they met with him at the old home. Since his death they have alternated their place of meeting from one of the children's homes to another, or to some summer resort. Last Wednesday they, and quite a number of their relatives, met at the home of their brother, Dr. Q. H. Cooke in Rich Square, where they were served in the grove of the Baptist Church near by, with a real old-fashioned barbecue and Brunswick stew dinner, with all its accessories. There are nine of the children, six boys and three girls. All of them are married and have children. Beginning with the oldest boy and going down to the youngest, their names and addresses are: John H. Cooke, Aulander; Charlie A. Cooke, Elizabeth City; James E. Cooke, Belross; Norman W. Cooke, Andrews, South Carolina; Quinton H. Cooke, Rich Square; Eugene M. Cooke, Wadesboro. The girls in like order, are Nellie Lassiter, and Mattie Pittman, Aulander, and Eulaiah Joyner, Woodland. All of these were present. Next day after partaking of a sumptuous dinner with their sister, Mrs. Lassiter, they went to the cemetery and placed flowers on the graves of their mother and father and other relatives, and from there departed for their respective homes.

BACHELORS! HERE'S YOUR CHANCE!

If you are a young fellow with no matrimonial prospects, here is your opportunity—or rather opportunity—to get yourself a wife. These two Chicago bachelors, June Zeiser, 21 (left), and her sister, Cecelia, 25, are only too willing to wed. But there's one little catch to it. The man—or man—who takes advantage of their bachelors must agree to pay off forty-eight $25.00 mortgages on their mother's 40-acre farm near Milwaukee. That's why they are making the offer. And the nice place—or acceptance—must come quickly, as a sheriff's sale is looming.

quently, many of these frocks have huge swirls of ostrich feathers down one side of the skirt.

London, Sept. 17.—Applied designs are being extensively used today not only on gowns but also on lingerie. White crepe de chine appliqued with floral designs in white satin makes up one attractive lingerie set.

New York, Sept. 17.—One feature of the ensembles frocks which bid fair to be immensely popular this fall is the combination of materials. A silk frock has a wool coat, and so on. The coats often are of seven-eighths length.

New York, Sept. 17.—Wool challie, that soft and lovely material, is "in" again. House frocks of challie, "striped" and figured, are among the prettiest showings of the season at present.

New York, Sept. 17.—Among the shoes for street wear shown here today is a pump of almost startling simplicity. Of caramel tinted knit, it has neither stiletto nor cut-outs, merely one slim ankle-strap.

Paris, Sept. 17.—The host of ostrich tips in bright colors is sometimes used as a ruffle now. It encircles a dance frock or an evening wrap, impartially.

London, Sept. 17.—Lingerie in soft printed silk is much in favor at present. Sometimes these undergarments are Dresden shepherdess in their designs, and trimmed with only a binding of bright ribbon.

London, Sept. 17.—The jeweled anklet keeps pace today with the bracelet. One noted beauty appeared at a fashionable dinner-dance place the other evening in a black evening gown relieved by two jade bracelets on her right arm and five jade anklets on her left ankle.

Paris, Sept. 17.—The dazzling tones of brilliants with which many a dance frock is now equipped is almost too dazzling without some softening relief. Cons-
