HOPE.

All The Year Round.

The truth is, that man can better afford to sacrifice his dinner daily for a year than live without hope for a week. And nature has reconized that it is so, What phrase is more common in our mouths than the simple but significative 'I hope!" Nor is there any human being, however efflicted, | days. who was not originally endowed with this capacity of hope. Go to the hospitals, where one might suppose it was easy to find dispair in many aspects. The doctor evidence of human foresight and experience live one day more. "Well, and how are you?" you say to the sick man, and perhaps you cannot help betraying in your tone the pity you feel for him, thus hovering between the two worlds, about one of which "Oh, much bet.er." he replies, decisive. with a strong hope in his voice and eyes.

STILL SOLID.

Argonaut.

President Harrison went into the presi. dential chair, with a fixed purpose to break the Solid South. This was one of his pet schemes. In the recent election the entire influence of the Administration was brought to hear to elect Mahone in Virginia. Gov. ernment patronage and money were em_ ployed for all they were worth. The most desperate effort was made to carry the State for Mahone. It was fondly hoped that the Solid South would be broken by the defeat of the Democratic party in Virginia. But instead of the result, so fondly hoped and earnestly labored for, the defeat of Mahone was so overwhelming as to astonish the Democrats themselves. The fact is, the course of the present Administration has been such as to make the South doubly solid. Thousands of white men in the South who have been heretofore voting the Republican ticket, we believe, will hereafter vote with the Democrats. Indeed we can. not see how a Southern white man who has

There upon the table stood "that wife of mine," and upon the rug before the fire lay the candy mou-e which had caused the great panic. The men left in disgust, and I told the figure on the table to come down and try in future not to get scared at such little things, She came down, but there was a like of pleasantness in her voice for several

I was among the multitude that met the train on Wednesday night. Never in my life have I seen such a gang looking for a train. Why editor there were all colors will whisper to you that this or that invalid is dooned, and that he cennot, by all the waiting room and held fast to the ticket office window until some lady place her No. 6 on my corn, then I let go that window and was pushed out on the walk, there I was caught between two ladies that would tip the beam at 187 lbs, and hal the breath and shape mashed out of me. After escapeing from their loving embrace I was shoved on around the building to the freight protector where I saw what is called a "he" dance, the set was made up of nothing but colored men. Walking past the projector to the wharf, there I saw fond lovers promenading too and fro. One couple I noticed more closely than the others, they seemed to be getting to the point, that a lover stammers to make. The lady wore a beautiful costome of green, the man wore a black suit, blue eye glasses and in his hand he held a cane. They drew near the edge of the wharf and stopped, the young man gazed out upon the star-lit waters as if he could catch from the silent deep, some tender expression, then looking up into the lustrous eyes of the fair maiden he, in a tremling voice, said: "If your answer be no my body shall rest beneath the deep and the waves that now roll on in playful glee, will then roll over the watery grave of a broken hearted lover, but it yes. I will be the happiest man that ever lived. As my attention was then called to a foot race between a young lady and the B. M. of the BEACON. I did not hear her answer, it must of been yes as the young man is yet on the town. While you know the man as no other person does, yet your readers do not, and for their benefit I will say. watch for the man that sports a cane and blue eye
