How Army Elephants Are Fed. Elephants in the Indian army are fed twice a day. When meal-time arrives they are drawn up in line before a row of piles of food. Each animal's breakfast includes ten pounds of raw rice, done up in five two-pound packages. The rice is wrapped in leaves, and then tied with grass. At the com-mand, "Attention!" each elephant raises his trunk, and a package is thrown into its capacious mouth. By this method of feeding not a single grain of rice is wasted.

SERMONS OF THE DAY.

RELIGIOUS TOPICS DISCUSSED BY PROMINENT AMERICAN MINISTERS.

'Four Anchors" is the Title of the Thirteenth Sermon in the New York Herald's Competitive Series-Dr. Talmage Preaches a Sermon to Sisters. Texr: "They east four anchors out of the Acts xxvii., 29. The symbolism of the text is striking and suggestive. Many lives have been ship-wrecked for the need of anchors holding them to steadfastness. However deep we may feel the waters to be through which we are salling, we are often nearer the shoals and reefs than is imagined.

The first anchor which should be thrown out is fixedness of purpose. The innermost secret of successful lives is in the concentration of power along certain finite lines. Paul says, "This one thing I do," and the world will ever do him reverence. Dr. Hudson Taylor says, "This one thing I do," and China is opened as never before to higher ideals and larger visions of life. The Earl of Shaftesbury says, "This one thing I do," and he goes down to the Holborn viaduet, in London, and the bootblacks and hucksters and street arabs and costermongers are transformed. The great names in art, in science in philosophy and in finance are always identified with pain and purpose. Life is power, but power undirected is lost. Only constant striking on the same spot makes an impression. Purpose connects and an impression. Purpose connects and unifies our months and years and makes of hem all but parts of a single whole. Each day ought to be a link tempered and welded into the chain of a completed life. Three-fourths of men's failures may be attributed to the lack of purpose. The house can scarcely be constructed without a plan; how much loss can a human life be fashioned without a conception of what it will be when finished? Plan must precede construction; the ideal before the realiza-tion, the purpose before the accomplishment. Only the man who aims will strike the mark. Turn your life into a definite channel; let it not cover too much terrifor it is the deeply flowing stream which cuts away the obstructions and at last reaches the sea, while the stream which spreads itself in shallowness goes silently into the swamp-land and its life is ended. The analysis of every completed life reveals a central point about which energy and emotion and devotion cluster themselves.

But purpose to exert its influence must be accompanied by perseverance, so cast out the second anchor. Here is a vast dif-ference between the aim and the accomplishment. Perseverance is the bending of the bow to send the shaft at the target. and the bow is the will. "I will fight it out on this line if it takes all summer. says the great general. That is the spirit which conquers. No sooner have our plans been drafted or our purpose fixed than cir-cumstances and difficulties seem to con-spire to defeat and ruin them. Many a man has seen his star in the east, but only here and there has one been possessed of the courage and devotion to follow it over an unbeaten path until it led him to his treasure. It is blood earnestness which tells. The man who is ever unconscious of defeat is he who some day will plant his standard upon the enemies' ramparts and win the day. He who holds on in the face of the storm, in spite of discouragements, calmly suffering temporary delays, is he who finally secures his crown and his reward. Shall we complain of difficulties when a thou-sand fingers are pointing at wonderful achievements, made after overcoming tre-mendous obstacles? Helen Kellar, without sight, without hearing, without language, presses on until she passes the entrance examinations to Harvard University. John Bunyan, the drunken tinker of Bedford, rises to the authorship of "Pilgrim's Prog-ress." It is half-heartedness which falls, but the "doing with thy might" which suc-ceeds. Before a determined will and a passionate devotion men will stand aside and let you pass-they cannot help it; difficulties will vanish—they cannot withstand you; obstruction will be crushed—their

Then, in order to make perseverance ossible, anchor the third, faith in one's alf. Too often the estimate of our power falls far short of what it really is. Emer-son's word, "Trust thyself," carries with it a true philosophy, for one may not achieve until there is a firm belief in one's own soul. If we rate our ideal at 100 and our power at fifty the accomplishment will be but one-half. The great crime men com-mit against themselves is not in overjudging, but in underjudging. My self-set limitations determine the extent of my achievement. And what right has man, born in the image of God, with-unknown and undeveloped powers standing before a hidden future, to measure and to circumscribe his capabilities and to limit his pos-sibilities of success in the construction of life? Only God may measure man, for only God knows the height the individual may reach. Men who to-day are almost measureless in their intellectual sweep are they who have not dared with compass and rule to set their bounds. This is not conceit, but a respect for the untouched, undreamed of potency of your own soul. So then, believe not only in your ideal, but in the possibility of realizing it. And then the fourth anchor, faith in God. We may imagine Paul as the last anchor is thrown out calling to the sallers "Men does it hold?" and the answer coming back, "Yes; the rope is taut; we do not see the ledge down below the waves, but the anchor holds." Ah! that is the blessed experience of life; this anchor always gras the solid rock, the unseen rock of God! Faith connects man with Omnipotence. Faith is the conductor which places at our disposal divine grace and power. This the testimony of every child of faith, can do all things through Him." This the power not our own which may be nopropriated. And there are times when the safety of the whole life depends upen this anchor. The anchor of purpose may be dislodged and flung high upon the shore by storm and tempest; the anchor of perseverance may be worn away by the fretting time and the cutting sands, the anchor of faith may snap in twain in some fearful crisis when the strain is great and the heart is sick, but away down below the erashing billows of passion and temptation fests the anchor of faith embedded in the heart of God. So let us live with a noble purpo worthy the patient endeavor and unfaitering devotion we bestow upon it, mindful of our own undiscovered resources and holding fast to the might of God.

FOR GIRLS.

Rev. Dr. Talmage Preaches Directly to the Sisters. TEXT: "And his sister stood afar off to witness what would be done to him."-Exodus ii., 4. Princess Thermutis, daughter of Phacoah, looking out through the lattice of her bathing-house on the banks of the Nile, saw a curious boat on the river. It had neither our nor belin, and they would have been useless anyhow. There was only one passenger, and that a baby boy. The boat was made of the broad leaves of papyrus, lightened together by bitumen. "Kill all ine Hebrew children born," had been Phacoah's order. To save her boy, Jochebed, he mether of little Moses, had put him in that queer boat and launched him. His sister, Miriam, stood on the bank watching Princess Thermutis, daughter of Phauster, Miriam, stood on the bank watching that precious craft. She was far enough off not to draw attention to the boat but hear enough to offer protection. There the stands on the bank -Mirlam, the poet sss; Miriam, the quick-witted; Miriam, the faithful; though very human, for in after time she demonstrated it. Oh, was not Mirium, the sister of Moses, glorious thing when she watched the boat woven of river plants and made water-tight with asphaltum, carrying its one passen-ger? Did she not put all the ages of time and of a coming eternity under obligation when she defended her helpless brother from the perils aquatic, reptilian and ravenous? She it was that brought that wonderful babe and its mother together, so that he was reared to be the deliverer of his nation, when otherwise, if saved at all from the rushes of the Nile, he would have been the rushes of the Nile, he would have been only one more of the God-defying Pharoahs; for Princess Thormutis, of the bathing-house, would have inherited the crown of Egypt; and, as she had no child of her own, this adopted child would have come to coronation. Had there been no Miriam there would have been no Moses. What a garland for a faithful sisterhood!

Miriam was the oldest of the family:

Miriam was the oldest of the family; Moses and Aaron, her brothers, were younger. Oh the power of the elder sister to help decide the brother's character for usefulness and for heaven! Sne can keep off from her brother more evils than Miriam could have driven back water-fowl or croco-dile from the ark of bulrushes. The older sister decides the direction in which the cradle boat shall sail. By gentleness, by good sense, by Christian principle she can turn it toward the palace, not of a wicked Pharaoh, but of a holy God; and a brighter princess than Thermutis should lift him out of peril, even religion, whose ways are ways of pleasantness and all her paths are The older sister, how much the world owes her! Born while yet the family was in limited circumstances, she had to hold and take care of her younger brothers. And if there is anything that excites my sympathy, it is a little girl lugging around great fat child and getting her ears exed because she can not keep him quiet! By the time she gets to young womanhood she is pale and worn out, and her attractiveness has been sacrificed on the altar of isterly fidelity and she is consigned to cellbacy, and society call her by an unfair name; but in heaven they call her Mirlam. Let sisters not begrudge the time and care destowed on a brother. It is hard to believe that any boy that you know so well as your brother can ever turn out anything very useful. Well, he may not be a Moses. There is only one of that kind needed for rhere is only one of that kind heeded for six thousand years. But I tell what your brother will be—either a blessing or a curse to society, and a candidate for happi-ness or wretchedness. He will, like Moses. have the choice between rubies and living coals, and your influence will have much o do with his decision. He may not, like Moses, be the deliverer of a nation, but he may, after your father and mother are be the deliverer of a household What thousands of homes to-day are piloted by brothers! There are properties now well invested and yielding income for the support of sisters and younger brothers because the older brother rose to the leadership from the day the father lay down to die. Whatever you do for your brothers will come back to you again.

Don't snub him. Don't depreciate his ability. Don't talk discouragingly about his future. Don't let Miriam get down off the bank of the Nile and wade out and upset the ark of bulrushes. Don't tease him.

Don't let jealousy ever touch a sister's soul, as it so often does, because her brother gets more honor or more means. Even Miriam, the heroine of the text, was struck by that evil passion of jealousy. She had possessed unlimited influence over Moses, nd now he marries, and not only so, but marries a black woman from Ethiopia; and Miriam is so disgusted and outraged Moses, first because he had married at all, and next because he had practiced miscegena tion, ithat she is drawn into a frenzy, and then begins to turn white, and gets white as a corose, and then whiter than a corose. Her complexion is like chalk, the fact is, she has the Egyptian leprosy. And now the brother whom she had defended on the Nile comes to her rescue in a prayer that brings her restoration. Let there be no room in all your house for jealousy either to sit or stand. It is a leprous abomination. Your brother's success, O sisters, is our success. His victories will be your

If you only knew it, your interests are identical. Of all the families of the earth that ever stood together, perhaps the most conspicuous is the family of the Roths-As Mayer Anselm Rothschild was ut to die, in 1812, he gathered his chiliren about him-Anselm, Solomon, Nathan, Charles and James—and made them promise that they would always be united on Change. Obeying that injunction, they have been the mightiest commercial power on earth, and at the raising or lowering of their scepter nations have risen or fallen That illustrates how much, on a large scale and for selfish purposes, a united family may achieve. But suppose that instead of a magnitude of dollars as the object, it be doing good, and making salutary impres-sion, and raising this sunken world, how much more ennobling! Sister, you do our part, and brother will do his part. If Miriam will lovingly watch the boat on the Nile, Moses will help her when leprous disasters strike.

General Bauer, of the Russian cavalry, liad in early life wandered off in the army and the family supposed he was dead. Afer he gained a fortune he encamped one day in Husam, his native place, and made a banquet; and among the great military men who were to dine he invited a plain miller and his wife, who lived near by and who, affrighted, came, fearing some harm would be done them. The miller and his wife were placed one on each side of the General at the table. The General asked the miller all about his family, and the miller said that he had two brothers and a sister. "No other brothers?" "My younger brother went off with the army many years ago, and no doubt was long ago killed." Then the General said: "Soldlers, I am this man's younger brother, whom he thought was dead." And how loud was the cheer, and now warm was the embrace! Brother and sister, you need as much of an introduction to each other as they did You do not know each other. You think your brother is grouty and cross and queer, and he thinks you are selfish and proud and unlovely. Both wrong! That brother will be a prince in some woman's eyes, and that sister a queen in the estimation of some man. That brother is a magnificent fellow, and that sister is a morning in June Come, let me introduce you; "Moses, this is Miriam." "Miriam, this is Moses." Add seventy-five per cent. to your present ap-preciation of each other, and when you kiss good morning do not stick up your cold cheek, wet from the recent washing as though you hated to touch each others lips in affectionate caress. Let it have all the foundness and cordiality of a loving sis

I read of a child in the country who was detained at a neighbor's house on a stormy night by some fascinating stories that were being told him, and then looked out and saw it was so dark he did not dare go home saw it was so dark he did not dare go home the incident impressed me the more because in my childhood I had much the same experience. The boy asked his comrades to go with him, but they dared not It got later and later -7 o'clock, 8 o'clock. 9 o'clock. "Oh," he said, "I wish I were home!" As he opened the door the last time a blinding flash of lightning and a designing row oversame him. But after deafening roar overcame him. But after awhile he saw in the distance a lantern awhile he saw in the distance a faintern and lo! his brother was coming to fetch him home, and the lad stepped out and with swift feet hastened on to his brother who took him home, where they were agiad to greet him, and for a long time supper had been waiting. So may it be when the night of death comes and our earthly friends can not go with us, and we dar not go alone; may our Brother, our elder Brother, our Friend closer than a brother, come out to meet us with the light of the promises, which shall be a lantern to our feet; and then we will go be to join our loved ones waiting for us, supper all ready, the marriage supper of the Lamb!

HELPS FOR HOUSEWIVES.

To Carve Ham.

First have a good, sharp carving knife, so that thin slices are easily cut. The most usual way is to begin at a little distance from the knuckle, and to proceed towards the thick end or blade. If a ham is baked instead of boiled, it is easier to cut it thin.

To Wash Blankets.

When washing these at home the laundress must proceed in the following manner: Into two quarts of water shred half a bar of best yellow soap, and pour the liquid into a tub of warm water, together with a tablespoonful of liquid ammonia to every gallon. Dip the blankets into this lather and rub them thoroughly in this. When clean, rinse the blankets in tepid water, wring out, and hang to dry in the Cologne in the Cookery.

It is no secret that the French culinary expert employs eau de cologne to produce with other essences that subtle mysterious but delicious flavor often tasted in fruit salads and other cookery confections. In the genuine cologue there is compressed extract of rosemary and lemon thyme. Here is a real French dessert: Put in a salad bowl a layer of chopped ice, well powdered with sugar, and upon this a layer of bananas; again a handful of chopped ice and sugar, and after this bananas, repeating till the bowl is full as required. Pour upon the fruit a wine glass of water in which you have dropped a lump of sugar that has absorbed three drops of almond essence, and another that has absorbed three drops of genuine eau de cologne.

Rats and Mice. The best way to destroy mice and rats is to catch them, writes "White Ribbon," For mice, I set a pan or wide mouthed washbowl, in a closet or cellar, filling it with milk or water on which bran has been sprinkled. Five drowned mice have been found in one earthen washbowl in the morning. For rats, a larger vessel must be set, such as a barrel or tub. Partly fill with water, sprinkle bran on the surface, tie a bit of mest or fish as bait, to a chip, and let it float on the water. Make a walk of board for the rats to climb up on, and the trap is

I have caught many mice with bowls and tin kettles. Use a strip of pasteboard an inch wide by four long. Bend in the middle forming a rectangular triangle. To one end pin a bait of meat, fish or cheese, and stand the strip on one end on the shelf, balancing one edge of the kettle on the corner where it is bent. The other edge of the kettle's mouth rests on the shelf, and the baited end of pasteboard bends forward inside of the mouth. The mouse must go inside, directly under the mouth, to nibble the bait, and as the slightest jar disturbs the kettle from its precarious position, Mr. Mouse is imprisoned. A larger heavier device may be used for rats. A trap must be washed or smoked out every time it has enter-tained a rodent. Never let children destroy or see them destroyed. Have a reliable adult dispatch them painlessly.—New England Homestead.

Fruits for the Table in Winter.

Apples, as a rule, are more easily digested cooked than raw, although raw apples are more palatable.

Fruits are more appetizing, and, perhaps, more easily digested, if taken in the early part of the day-whether or not before the breakfast must be determined by the eater.

Grapes, oranges and shaddocks may be served before the cereal. Baked apples, peaches, baked bananas, figs. dates, prunes or stewed fruits should be served at the close of the break-

The sub-acid fruits, such as apples, figs, dates, peaches, persimmous, pears, prunes and apricots, are, perhaps, the best of the winter fruits, and may be used to good advantage with animal

Raisins, sultanas, dried figs and prunes should be soaked thoroughly, so that they may take up the same amount of water with which they have parted in the process of drying, and should then be heated just enough to soften the skins.

Acid fruits must at all times be used most sparingly, especially by persons inclined to rheumatic troubles. The continued use of an orange or shaddock before breakfast will diminish the power of stomach digestion for cereals, or such foods as require only intestinal digestion.

The papaw and pineapple belong to a class alone. They contain a vegetable pepsin which assists in the digestion of the nitrogenous principles. These fruits, then, may be served with meats, and will aid in their digestion; when served with bread and butter they do not form so good a diet. They are more digestible raw than cooked, as the heat destroys the activity of the ferments.

The fashion of adding sugar to fruits should be avoided, as they have already been endowed with a sufficient amount of sugar, and as all the starch and cereals are converted into sugar any further amount would be stored in the system, to its detriment. If our bilious friends would throw aside their liver pills, and with them, sugar, they might be free from much discomfort.-Mrs. S. T. Rorer, in Ladies' Home Journal.

From the Republican, Versailles, Ind. The Tuckers of Versailles, Ind., like all fond parents, are completely wrapped up in their children. Their daughter Lucy, in particular, has given them much concern. She is fifteen, and from a strong, healthy girl, three years ago, had become weak and kept falling off in flesh, until she became a mere skeleton. She seemed to have no life at all. Her blood became impure and finally she became the victim of nervous prostration. Doctors did not help her. Most of the time she was confined to bed, was very nervous and irritable, and seemed on the verge of St. Vitus' dance. "One morning," said Mrs. Tucker, "the doctor told us to give her Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, which he brought with him. He said he was treating a similar case with these pills and they were curing the patient. We began giving the pills and the next day could see a change for the better.

Discussed Their Daughler's Case for Hours. The doctor came and was surprised to see such an improvement. He told us to keep giving her the medicine. We gave her one pill after each meal until eight boxes had been used when she was well. She has not been sick since, and we have no foar of the old trouble returning. We think the cure almost miraculous.'

A Cricket Thermometer.

The rate of chirp of the cricket, Professor A. E. Dolbear notes in the American Naturalist, seems to be entirely determined by the temperature, and this to such degree that one may easily compute the temperature from the chirps per minute. Thus, at sixty degrees Fahrenheit, the rate is eighty per minute. At seventy degrees Fahrenheit the rate is 120, a change of four chirps a minute for each degree of change. Below a temperature of fifty degrees the cricket has no energy to waste in music, and there would be but forty chirps per minute.
