For Coroner—B. S. LUCAS.

We believe in justice in all things, and since there is so much agitation in the county over the country saloons, we are anxious to see the matter put to a vote of the people, without their being harassed for or against. Nothing short of this will be just or honest. Educate the people and use all the moral suasion you please against the use of tobacco and whiskey, but let them vote to suit themselves. We put tobacco first because it is a fact that it reaches the children, weakens their constitutions and causes the craving for whiskey later. The man who uses or sells tobacco and preaches temperance is inconsistent, to say the least.

OUR FIRST GREAT WORK.

Gov. Jarvis Says It Is The Education Of The Children.

Ex-Governor and Ex-Senator T. J. Jarvis of North Carolina is now in the sunset of life. His has been a noble record on the pages of North Carolina history. The following words from a private letter written by him breathe a lofty statesmanship and a broad patriotism:

"I look upon the education of the children of the South as the first great work to engage the time and thought and labors of every lover of his country and his kind.

"I am grateful for the help of the people of the North, but all the work must be done by the men and women of the South. We understand the conditions better and can deal with them wiser than strangers. But our people themselves must be taught to deal with these conditions in a spirit of fairness and broad statesmanship. We have two races living in the South. These races are distinct and must remain so, and yet they must live here together. My judgment is that it is better for both that each be educated and trained and elevated to the highest state of citizenship of which it is capable.

It is also my judgment that the church and the school house are the best agencies for making good citizens. If these agencies cannot help us in solving the race problem, then indeed we have a hopeless task on our hands. But thank God I am a man of faith. I believe in God and in my fellow-men, and I believe the people of the South can solve all problems presented to them if they will cleave to the church and the school house; and that too in a manner which shall make them and their section a great power for good in the world."

The hand of fortune often looks suspiciously like four aces.

A RAPE FIEND

Gets What He Richly Deserves.

On Friday evening last while Mrs. Jas. C. Smith, living near Goldsboro, was preparing supper, and in the absence of her husband, Tom Jones, a brutal negro fiend, approached the house and made an improper proposal to her, saying that if she complied with his demands he would not hurt her, but if she refused he would kill her.

She indignantly refused and the villain dragged her from her house to a thicket and accomplished his purpose, having beaten her almost to death, and left her as he doubtless thought dead.

Mrs. Smith, who is young and pretty, was alone, but for two small children who hearing the pitiful cries for mercy from their mother, left the house and ran to a neighbor's where they told as best they could what had occurred.

Help came, but too late. The negro had left his victim where he had dragged her unconscious and disfigured.

Almost the entire community began to hunt for Jones, who had hidden himself in a swamp, nor did they relax for a moment until he was caught as he emerged from the swamp soon after midnight Sunday morning. When caught he confessed, was bound and locked in a barn to await the arrival of the sheriff.

Later ten men disguised as negroes came up and demanded his person. The officer in charge resisted, and was shot in the neck, but not seriously. The men broke down the door, took the negro to the woods, bound him to a log and riddled his body with bullets and buckshot.

Mrs. Smith will live but is horribly disfigured. Her hands are badly cut, her eye gouged out, jawbone smashed, and her throat and breast discolored from choking and beating.

Can men be blamed for thus dealing with such brutes?

Push Not Luck.

Business push is necessary for business success. The man who expects his business to prosper, just because it is his dream, will probably find his dream developing into a nightmare of complications from which he will be relieved by the action of the courts. If he escapes the disadvantages of a serious ending of his commercial hopes it is often more luck than anything else. But luck in business is just about as elusive as in any other feature of life. Luck will be a blessing when it comes but will be a disappointment to those who depend on it. Luck gives brightness at the time when least expected but will disappoint because it cannot be depended upon. Push for business and win, but don't just hope for good results and depend on a happening to insure success. Wise planning will result in rich returns. Active hustle will command respect. Intelligent publicity will prove the best investment. There won't be any luck, or chance about it. It is a tangible certainty is reliable as an asset and on which the returns will always justify the expense.—Advertising World.
