To Drive Out Malaria

And Build Up The System

Take the Old Standard GROVE'S TASTELESS chill TONIC. You know what you are taking, as the formula is printed on every label, showing it is Quinine and Iron in a tasteless form. The Quinine drives out malaria, the Iron builds up the system. 50 cents.

He Would Pay.

It happened at a Christmas party. A pretty young lady had asked one of the male guests to pass a dish of almonds and raisins.

"With pleasure," he replied, "but do you know that what you have asked for is called in the vernacular 'Kiss-miss,' and that the penalty of a kiss attaches to the request?"

"Is that so?" answered the lady, calmly. "I must consult my husband." And she called across the room to him, and repeated the observation.

"Quite so," he replied. "According to custom, it is a just debt and must be paid. But is the gentleman aware of the arrangement made when we were married—that I must settle all my wife's liabilities?"

How Germans Attack.

It has frequently been stated of late that the German troops attack in mass formation even in the face of machine gun and shell fire, a policy little short of suicidal under conditions of modern warfare. A Dutch army officer who has been an observer on the front says that this is not strictly so. He states that the attack has the appearance of a mass attack because it is composed of successive waves of infantry. The rear waves are kept in close formation to heighten the morale of the troops, but the attack is not a mass attack, strictly speaking. The Germans charge in close order when they have located what they consider the weak spot in the line of defense.

Coercion.

"Charley, dear," said young Mrs. Torkins, "do you want me to vote?"

"Certainly I do."

"You're sure you want me to?"

"Yes, indeed."

"Well, then, I won't do it unless you buy me that hat I showed you in the window."

What He Did Know.

"Are potatoes hard to raise?"

"I don't know. But the price of potatoes is."

COOLING THINGS FOR HOT DAYS.

Ice-cold coffee diluted about half the strength used when serving it hot, is a most refreshing cool drink for warm weather. Serve it with a slice of lemon in each cup.

Iced Cocoa.—Sift a cupful of cocoa with three-quarters of a cupful of sugar, pour a cupful of hot water over the mixture and boil until a rich sirup results. Keep this in a jar in the ice chest and when wishing to serve it, a tablespoonful of the sirup is stirred into a glass of cold milk. Cocoa is liked by some with a very little vanilla flavor and a teaspoonful of cornstarch to give it more richness. A pinch of cinnamon or cloves is another addition liked by some. Chill the cocoa, mix it with sugar and cream and serve with whipped cream on top.

Fruit Mint Julep.—Boil three pints of water and one and a half pounds of sugar ten minutes. Remove from the heat and add a packed cupful of mint leaves. Cover and let stand ten minutes. Strain through two thicknesses of cheesecloth and cool. Strain the juice of 12 lemons, add one and a half cupfuls each of orange and strawberry juice and turn into the mint sirup; let blend at least an hour. When ready to serve pour a quart of charged water over a large piece of ice in the punchbowl, then turn in the mint julep. Sprigs of mint and a few slices of fresh strawberries make a pretty addition to the bowl.

The secret of fine-flavored iced tea is to make it fresh. Draw the tea about three minutes, then pour it over ice and let stand in chilled ice until chilled. Serve by filling glasses one-third full of shaved ice and top with a bit of lemon. Let each person sweeten his own tea.

Gingerade.—This is a drink which should be used as it is not only palatable but economical. Stir a tablespoonful of ginger with four of sugar, add a pint of chilled water and serve when settled. Some like a dash of vinegar, others a little molasses instead of sugar for sweetening. This is an old-fashioned harvest drink.

Orangeade.—For this simple drink allow a pint of cold water for each pint of orange juice with the juice of one lemon. Add sugar to taste and stand near the ice until ready to serve. At serving time beat an egg very light and pour the liquid over it. Serve at once.

Our greatest glory consists not in never falling, but in rising every time we fall.—Oliver Goldsmith.

It's the man's own push that generally gets him a pull.

ECONOMY HINTS.

When vegetables such as lettuce are wilted do not throw them away, wash in cold water then place in a pail tightly covered and let stand an hour or two when the crisp freshness will have returned. Parsley may be kept for two or three weeks, by washing it carefully and then putting it into a glass jar with a cover well screwed on. It will help to wash the parsley once or twice during the time it is kept, shaking off the surplus water. A coffee can is a fine receptacle for crisping lettuce or parsley as it is easier to handle from a large-mouthed receptacle.

This is the season for mushrooms and they may be found in old pastures or woods in abundance, affording delicious food at little cost.

Raspberries and strawberries keep better when spread out on a platter or plate, in fact twice as long as when heaped in a dish; the weight of the berries crush and spoil them.

Oatmeal Cookies.—Take two cupfuls of fine or ground oatmeal which has been browned, two cupfuls of flour, one egg, a half cupful of sour milk and a half teaspoonful of soda, a half cupful of shortening and a cupful of sugar, add raisins and nuts and drop from a teaspoon on a well-greased baking pan.

Rhubarb is delicious baked, using a cupful of sugar to a pint of finely cut rhubarb. Bake in an earthen dish until jellylike in consistency.

Rhubarb Cup Pudding.—Put a teaspoonful of sweetened, stewed rhubarb into a buttered cup. Pour boiling water on a pint of bread crumbs and let them soak until soft and then drain. Add a well beaten egg to the crumbs, a tablespoonful of sugar and a little nutmeg. Turn this over the rhubarb in the cups and bake. Add a cupful of chopped peanuts that have been carefully cleaned from the little brown husk, to a well cooked corn mush and mold in a small bread pan to cut in slices to fry. Other nuts such as hickory or walnut meats may be added, but the peanuts are so common that they are always in the market.

Net, Loveliest of Summer Fabrics.

Whoever first wove threads of cotton or silk into fine net might have been inspired by the morning mist that rises from lakes and seas. An ambition to clothe human beings in something as cool and airy and as little burdensome as the mist itself, has wedded designers to the idea that net is the loveliest of all things for summer dresses. They go on turning out new models of many kinds, for net lends itself to many styles. And women go on buying net gowns for daytime and for evening wear, for the sake of beauty and summer comfort.

A white net frock is shown in the picture made over a slip of organdie in white also. But it is one of the advantages of the net frock that slips worn under it may lend it color and help add that spice of variety which lends zest to dress. Each frock merits one or two colored slips in addition to one in white, giving to it a wide range.

The collar in this particular model is prettily edged with a ruffle of net and ornamented with a very simple decoration of silk soutache braid. It is so large that it is really a cape falling more than half way to the waist at the back. Braid on the bodice defines the neck and the edge of the belt. It outlines a panel from waist to hem in the front of the skirt.

A wide tuck is set in the skirt above the hem and the straight, plain sleeves are relieved by a similar tuck.

Pocketless gown is not in the mind of anyone this summer, hence large pockets at each side of the skirt make an excellent place for more braid. Crochet buttons in groups of three put the finishing touch on bodice and belt.

Rival Fabrics in Children's Dresses.

White voile is making an important place for itself in the wardrobe of very little girls. It promises to rival India linen and batiste, or to out-rival them, as available for the plainer thin white dresses that are needed in quantities by little misses—especially in summer time. Its durability is a strong recommendation for it and it is made up very simply in dresses that are expected to see much service. It is the least expensive means at hand for mothers who like best to see their little ones in white.

The dress of voile shown in the picture is plain, with the skirt set on to a straight yoke and finished with a very wide hem. The hommed edge of the yoke extends over the skirt, like a tuck and a row of brier stitching in mercerized cotton defines the top of the hem. Its lower edge and the edges of the collar and cuffs are all finished with a very small crochet edge of fine mercerized cotton thread, usually in a light plank or blue. A very narrow hem is basted in the material and the edge crocheted through it.

Another little dress trimmed with val insertion and edging is shown. It is a one-piece pattern with a very narrow round yoke in embroidered swiss organdie. What distinguishes it as new is the addition of pieces at the front that simulate a little jacket or cape—in the back extended into a cape collar. The little yoke is finished with val edging, drawn up with narrow satin ribbon, tied in a bow at the front. Two tiny silk roses are made of narrow ribbon and posed on the cape at the front.

At a British Red Cross sale a pound of sausage was sold for £23.

CARE FOR FARM IMPLEMENTS

Keep Bolts on Binders Tight by Going Over Machine Often—Have Accessories Handy.

(By H. F. KIDDER, Louisiana Experiment Station.)

The life of the average farm implement is too short. Grain binders last only four or five years on the average, while rice binders will perform their functions just one or two years. Most everyone has seen binders fifteen years old still doing good work. Why? Simply because care has been given them. All bolts kept tightened by going over the machine twice a day or even more frequently is an excellent thing. Further, the operator must be able to run his machine and keep a sharp lookout for loose parts. Jolting will, in time, loosen nuts unless they are set.

Robbing one implement for another is bad practice. Farm laborers will invariably do this unless strict orders have been given to the contrary. A small room equipped with extra bolts, nuts and other accessories is a necessity. By giving attention even to the

PROGRESS OF VELVET BEANS

Crop Makes Rapid Strides Once They Begin to Make Vines—Harvest Very Late in Season.

(By W. R. DODSON, Louisiana Experiment Station.)

Velvet beans should not, as a rule, be planted before the middle of June. They are slow in starting to grow, but make rapid progress once they begin to make vines. They are generally planted in rows wider than other legumes; five to six-foot rows give satisfactory results, with the beans two feet apart in the row.

Velvet beans should be harvested as late in the season as will permit of the completion of the harvest before frost. The vines continue to grow until frost kills them. If they are not harvested before they are frosted, then it is better to leave them until they are thoroughly killed and dried in the field and pasture them.

Muddled.

The day was drawing to a close. Judge, jurors, witnesses and lawyers—all were growing weary. Counsel for the prosecution was cross-examining the defendant.

"Exactly how far is it between the two towns?" he asked at length.

For some time the man stood thinking, then:

"About four miles as the cry flows," came the answer.

"You mean as the flow cries!" retorted the man of law.

The judge leaned forward.

"No," he remarked, suavely; "he means as the fly crows."

And they all looked at one another, feeling that something was wrong somewhere.
