

WITH BATTERY "B" AT CAMP SEVIER.

tery each twenty-four hours, causing each one to furnish the necessary pickets and officers one day and night each week. This is considered a most judicious method and is held in much favor by each unit of the regiment.

At six o'clock—just as day begins to break—the regimental buglers herald the approach of the new day with "Reveille", the shrill, distinct notes of which arouses every soldier, who hurriedly dresses and emerges from his tent with a blanket thrown over his shoulders to keep off the keen sting of the spicy air. The mornings here are very chilly, but as the sun rises in the heavens the atmosphere becomes pleasant and exhilarating.

The formation for roll call is made at 6:15, which gives everyone ample time in which to prepare for same, and woe is to those who fail to answer when their names are called. Immediately after the roll call the ranks are opened and a short, brisk physical drill is given. The Battery is then dismissed for fifteen minutes, which time is devoted to arranging their toilet and getting their cots in shape.

They are formed again at 6:45 and drilled into a commodious mess hall, where a tempting breakfast is served under the direction of the efficient culinary artist, Grower C. Lilly, our mess sergeant. It is well to state right here that he is the most popular soldier in the camp, with the exception, of course, of the paymaster.

At 7:15 the sick call is made, which is answered by all who are suffering from any ailments, who are immediately taken to the infirmary where medical attention is given. If the case is of very serious nature the patient is taken to the base hospital, which is located about three miles from our camp.

From 7:30 to 8:00 a rigid physical drill is given, at the conclusion of which a rest of ten minutes is given.

From 8:10 to 9:00 a dismounted drill is given. This drill is given with the soldiers afoot. The different phases of the infantry drill is given in connection with the regular artillery drill. After forty minutes of this a rest of ten minutes is given.

Then the Battery is divided into four platoons which separate and repair to as many different sections of the drill ground. Different drills, lectures and instructions in signaling are given until 12:30 by the platoons leaders, which are lieutenants. During this period the stentorian commands of the officers can be distinctly heard from even the most remote sections of the drill ground, flags in semaphore signaling are in evidence in numerous places and the snappy, rhythmical patter of feet beat a constant tattoo upon the solid earth as the soldiers execute the commands of the officers. The Battery is then dismissed until 12 o'clock. The mid-day mess call is then made, and Sergeant Lilly receives another call from almost two hundred healthy, hungry soldiers.

The afternoon is taken up, to begin with, a physical drill which usually starts off with boxing, wrestling, foot races and various other sports, calculated to harden and enthrall the men. Then another snappy physical drill is given the men in unison by the Athletic Officer, Lt. Wm. E. Bangham, assisted by 1st Sgt. I. C. Hand, who is most proficient in calisthenics.

From four until five o'clock a non-commissioned officers' school is held under the direction of the Captain or ranking First Lieut.

scent over the horizon Retreat in sounded, and every Battery in the regiment is formed, a roll-call is made similar to that at Reveille, at the conclusion of which, with the foldiers standing at attention with heads erect and as immobile as statuettes the Regimental Band plays "The Star Spangled Banner". As the last notes die away in an echo every figure relaxes and the Batteries are dismissed with suitable commands. This signifies that a day's work is completed, and in a short while the soldiers are fed for the last time during that day.

As the chill of the night air begins to form, camp fires are started at innumerable places in the camp. The camp at night affords a most resplendent spectacle; the Nubian blackness of the night is most picturesquely offset by the brilliant glow of over a hundred camp fires, from around which emanate music of various varieties, furnished by the lusty lungs of healthy, good-natured troopers. The camp is filled with melody, and there prevails an air of perfect contentment.

The mess halls are used during this period by those who have relatives, friends and sweethearts to whom they wish to write of their experiences of camp life, etc.

At ten o'clock "Taps" is sounded by the buglers at headquarters, which is a general good-night that must be obeyed. Each corporal is then required to report the whereabouts of every man in his squad to the "Top" Sergeant, who turns the report over to the Battery Commander the following morning. In this manner every man is always accounted for.
