Expect Increase in Waste Fats Salvage

Arrangements have been completed for the waste fats salvage drive in this section, it was learned this week from Miss Helene Duval, secretary to the Washington County Salvage Committee. With two red ration points and 4 cents per pound now being given for waste household fats by local meat dealers, it is believed there will be a tremendous increase in the amount turned in by housewives of the county.

It is stated that no special containers are necessary for saving the fats. They may be collected in ordinary tin cans, although the large fruit-juice cans are recommended, since they will hold more. Retailers who receive the fats are advised to have one large container and to pour the fats into it for storage.

Arrangements have been made to have a Goldsboro firm pick up the salvaged grease when the stores have an accumulation of 50 pounds or more. The retailers are advised to pool their collections of the waste material and to notify the Goldsboro firm whenever they have 50 or more pounds on hand. The stores will be paid 5 cents per pound by the rendering firms.

The county rationing board advises passenger-car owners that their new tire inspection records were mailed to them at the time their new A gasoline allotment books were sent out. The new tire record is somewhat smaller than the old one, and a great many motorists have come to the office of the board asking for tire inspection records.

The old tire inspection records are being kept in the files of the rationing board, it is explained, and under no circumstances will they be returned to motorists.

The new tire inspection records for truck owners are also mailed out with their new gasoline allotments, but the old tire records are retained in the office of the rationing board, as in the case of passenger-car owners.

Retailers Should Determine Number of Tokens Needed

Official application blanks for the new ration tokens, which go into effect February 27, have not yet been mailed to retailers who do not have ration bank accounts, it was stated at the office of the rationing board here today. However, they will be sent out as soon as they are received by the board.

In the meantime, all retailers are advised to drop a postal card to their banks, telling them how many tokens they will need. This should be done so that the banks may know how many tokens to order. The application blanks for tokens will be sent out from the rationing board, while the tokens themselves will be issued only by banks.
