HOW OUR MEAT REACHES EUROPE

Meat and Other Food Saved by Tar Heel Farmers Helps to Win the War.

HOME MARKETS NOT SUPPLIED

Fork Sent to or Left at Local Markets Reaches Soldiers or Starving Women and Children by Proxy—North Carolina Cities and Towns Drawing Thousands of Pounds of Foodstuffs From Central West and Thereby Decreasing Supply Available for Shipment to Europe—Must Save All That Goes From Now On.

Raleigh.—"How will the meat I save reach a soldier or a needy person in Europe?"

This inquiry has been received by the Food Administration from scores of patriotic country people in North Carolina who have not been able to figure out just how pork which they save can be made to do war service or prevent death from starvation in the Allied or neutral countries of Europe.

The people who have been making this inquiry can use poultry, rabbits and other substitutes for meat and are in better position to swell the supply of pork available for export than any other class of people in the State, because the substitutes for pork and beef on the market cost more in most instances than these products do themselves.

In the course of a letter to Mr. E. N. Lindsay, a Wayne county farmer, Mr. John Paul Lucas, of the Food Administration, stated emphatically that: "Every hog marketed by the farmers of North Carolina finds its way by proxy to Europe where it aids in sustaining a soldier or saves from starvation a woman, child or man, because the marketing of a hog in our towns and cities releases for export the Central Western hog which would have been imported by the town in which the local hog was sold.

"The cities and towns of North Carolina have to depend for their pork and beef supplies largely upon the Central West instead of upon the farmers in their own State. The Food Administration, of course, is going to see that all of the people at home are supplied with food products before any is exported and this means that solid cars of meat which might be saving innocent people in Europe from actual starvation are being brought into North Carolina and other Southern States to supply the markets which should be supplied by our own farmers.

"Not one per cent of the people of America have any conception of the horror of the situation that confronts the civilian population of England, France and Italy, and the still more pitiful plight of the people of Finland, Switzerland and other neutral countries of Europe. Any surplus that we have is first divided with our Allies and the neutrals can get only what is left. Whether they get any at all depends upon the degree in which our people substitute other products which we have for the products which, because of their concentrated nature and keeping qualities are best adapted for export.

"Our normal surplus of wheat and meat has already been exported. What the people of Europe get from now on can come only from what we save out of our normal consumption of food products. Even at the best, tens of thousands of men, women and children will starve during the next four months; but every particle of food that is saved or marketed by any American will find its way over actually or by proxy to feed some soldier or to help save the life of some child, some woman, or some man in Europe.

"Facing these facts, can any normal human being, blessed as we in America are, refuse to economize in the use of all foodstuffs and to substitute for wheat, beef and pork products other things that we have in abundance? We are sure that no North Carolina family which is acquainted with these facts will refrain from doing its utmost to save life and suffering on the other side."

YOUR CHILDREN'S TEETH.

Upon the request of your progressive Supt. of schools, your efficient Board of Education rules that money be appropriated for the treatment of all of the school children's teeth. Your Board of County Commissioners, ever alive to the best interests of the people and of the county funds, at our earnest solicitation, wisely and humanely granted this money.

Send your children, without delay, to the office of Dr. McKinsey, Brevard, N. C., and he will give their teeth his best and most skillful attention, free of charge.

Send your children without further notice, tell your neighbors, act at once.

Do not neglect the teeth, there is every reason that they receive proper attention and not a single reason why they should be neglected.

The teeth constitute the individual's mill, they are the grinders, their proper work is the first great, and absolutely necessary, step in and for good digestion.

Think of this, a wonderful little mill, the incisors, the cuspids, the bi-cuspids and the molars. The incisors cut the food, the morsel to be ground, the cuspids make the first division of this morsel, again cutting and slightly grinding, the bi-cuspids next grind it to a finer mass, then it is passed to the molars, the great broad grinders, for its last subdivision, during all of this time the morsel is being intimately mixed with the saliva, and the first great and necessary step of digestion is taken and the stomach receives this properly prepared food and digestion is continued.

Properly treated teeth add to the personal appearance of the child. The teeth must be kept in proper condition if good health is obtained. Many diseases arise from bad teeth, which cause much unnecessary suffering and bad health. A child cannot do himself justice in school if handicapped with a mouth full of sore, aching, or decayed teeth. The entire system is often poisoned from the deadly blood poisoning virus formed in bad teeth, impoverished blood, a foul breath, a diseased stomach and indigestion are caused by bad teeth.

You would not expect a grist mill to prepare a finished product if the stones were dull, broken, or put out of condition in any way.

If the children of a given school have bad teeth, that school will not and cannot turn out as good scholars as it would and could, were the teeth kept in proper condition.

Bad teeth, bad digestion, bad health and bad lessons. When the physical condition is below normal mental efficiency is at par with it.

Have all of your children's teeth put in order at once and as they leave the dental chair let each one go to the drug store and get a tooth brush and use it daily, and ever afterwards go to the dentist at once if a single tooth becomes affected.

Yours truly,
C. W. HUNT, M. D.,
Town and County Health and Quarantine Officer.
