The CHEVROLET is The Car

The Worth of a Car is the Worth of the Motor

"It is the motor that makes the automobile from the standpoint of utility," says White, Woodward Auto Co., of Rosman, N. C., local dealers in Chevrolet passenger and commercial cars.

Hundreds of dollars may be spent on body comfort and appearance, but in the end, the enjoyment of a car is limited to the worth of the motor. Just as the heart is the center of life in a human being, so the motor is the heart of the automobile. It makes it go.

If a man has a strong heart he is generally capable of doing physical things. The ordinary tests of every day do not tax him at all, they do not wear him out. He has endurance. He lives long and is fit and vigorous in his old age. In just the same manner the capacity of a car for hard service and the length of that service depends on the character of its motor. It is because so many people fail to grasp this important point that they make so many costly experiments before finding real motoring satisfaction. It is because of this that so many makes of automobiles are permitted to flourish on the sole strength of attractive surface features before public opinion snuffs them out.

On the other hand the most successful cars of today are those whose motors have stood up to the tests of time. They are the kind in which the motor has been the first consideration. Then the rest of the car has been built to fit the power of the motor.

In such cars the motor is not taxed by unnecessary weight. Strength and flexibility have taken the place of bulk and the result is greater riding comfort, endurance, freedom from repairs and far more power at far less cost for fuel.
