MISS STANBERRY ENTERTAINS

On Thursday night of last week Miss Georgia Stanberry entertained a number of her young friends with a party at her home on Oakdale Ave.

The living room and dining room were beautifully decorated with roses and sweet peas.

Partners for the evening, were found by drawing an envelop which had part of a picture puzzle in it and then finding the person with the remainder of the picture. This furnished much amusement and entertainment.

Then the couples entered a very interesting advertising contest where they tried to guess what each picture stood for or what company it advertised. The couple with the most correct guesses received a prize.

The fortunate couple was Miss Nell Miller and Mr. Gene Stanberry who were presented with a small cedar chest filled with mints.

The guest of honor, Miss Florinda Cox of Greenville, S. C. was presented with a lovely powder pliff.

Music from both the piano and Edison was enjoyed.

Delicious fruit punch was served through the evening, Miss Yvonne Shuford presiding at the punch bowl.

An ice cream course and mints were served later.

Those present were, Misses Florinda Cox, Bertie Ballard, Yvonne Shuford, Mabel and Nell Miller, and Messrs Allison Orr, John White, Fred Holden, David Orr, and Clyde Blythe.

Mass Meeting At Mills River

this section more people, money and industries in order to make this part of the state blossom like a rose. In the work of aiding the development of Western North Carolina, Major Hall said that officials of his organization found that their entire work is based on roads. If an effort is made to find a suitable location for a factory the roads must be considered, he pointed out. "Everything Western North Carolina, Inc., is trying to do is based on good roads" he said.

The speaker told of plans for Western North Carolina, Inc., to issue a map giving details of a series of automobile tours through the Western part of the state.

L. P. Hamlin, of Brevard, spoke briefly. He gave his approval to the proposed road project. He told of the rich farming section of Mills River, and said that the new route would make Brevard 11 miles closer to Asheville and would be of benefit to both towns. He declared it was his opinion that the route would not be injurious to Hendersonville. On the contrary he believes Hendersonville will benefit either directly or indirectly.

Others speaking in favor of the proposed route were W. F. Cathey, J. O. Cox, C. H. Slifer, Charles E. Orr, Dr. Ed. English, and others, John Ewbank, editor of the Western North Carolina Times, of Hendersonville, said that he was for a good road no matter where it goes. He declared that he saw no reason for objections on the part of Hendersonville, and that he knows of no sentiment there against the project. Mr. Ewbank went into a discussion of road financing and told of the expense involved.

Robert Gash, an attorney of Brevard, declared that Mills River has the best farming section in Henderson County. He told something of the history of road building in this section. He stated that he was very desirous of seeing the proposed road materialize.

Rev. Dr. Hutchinson, a Presbyterian minister, spoke on the spiritual side of road building. He said that good roads lay the foundation for community growth and that they were needed to aid in school and church advancement.

Bert Ingle, farmer and real estate man, said he would prefer to pay double the present tax rate and have good roads than to do without them. Rev. Wallace Hartsell, Baptist Minister of Brevard, was also strongly in favor of the project.

Apparently Mills River wants the road to a man—the farmers, preachers, teachers, business men, women and children.

At the close of the meeting the good women of Mills River served refreshments. To those familiar with Mills River picnic, this statement is sufficient. To those not so blessed, we would say that a feast was served, ample to feed an army, and of variety and quality only equalled in Mills River, or in very few sections.

There will be meetings of the committees appointed in the next few days, and, as soon as the required data can be accumulated, another general meeting.
