JOSEPHUS DANIELS CONSTANT WORRY TO PARTY LEADERS

zing in his bonnet, took up the cudgel and answered his contemporary at a Durham Kiwanis Club talk, referring to the "fetish" and cry of "the ancient shibboleth—Local Self Government," which, he said to his hearers, has brought many units of the State to the very brink of bankruptcy from which the State, stepping in with 1927, 1928 and 1931 legislation, had to save them. Looks like the foundation for an issue there.

The Lieutenant Governor, even his opponents will admit, is getting about over the State and shaking more hands and talking with more people than any other man, and is admittedly developing a big following. Yet, it is claimed, he has no local organization, no nucleus of strength, and that the county leaders, within one week, could wrest from him the bulk of his following.

More and more insistent is the rumor that when the primary ballots are printed they will not contain more than one of the names of the original "four horsemen" prospects, and that the name of Allen J. Maxwell, commissioner of revenue, will be on that ticket. In fact, his friends would not be surprised if he becomes the first formally-announced candidate within the next two months. Willis Smith is feeling around, and may enter, but the prediction has been made that Maxwell and Fountain will be the final contestants.
