GREAT SMOKY MOUNTAINS NATIONAL PARK TO BRING MILLIONS OF PEOPLE INTO THIS SECTION ANNUALLY, SAYS GOV. GARDNER

the problem of preparing to reap the benefits and opportunities of this realized dream.

"Since 1924 North Carolina has been working in an official and organized way toward the acquisition of parks and recreational facilities in the Great Smoky Mountains. Today we see the task almost completed. Last reports show that only 53,000 acres remain to be acquired in the park area to bring the total to the minimum of 427,000 required by the federal government for a national park.

"It is appropriate on this occasion to acknowledge the great debt of gratitude which we owe to the vision and philanthropy of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., whose gift of $5,000,000 from the Laura Spellman Rockefeller Foundation, matched the combined sums furnished by the States of North Carolina and Tennessee and other private donations.

Extends Sixty Miles

"The heart of the Great Smoky Mountains National Park is of course the magnificent Great Smoky range which meanders through the park for more than sixty miles. Continuously for twenty-eight miles it is more than one mile above sea level. The highest peak is Clingman's Dome 6642 feet in altitude. The highest mountain above its immediate base is Mt. LeConte, which is 5 miles rise 5,300 feet, or more than one mile.

"In general it may be said the Tennessee side of the park gives the impression of ruggedness and the North Carolina side gives the impression of vastness. Nowhere in any climate is there such a variety of flowers, trees, shrubs. There are 152 varieties of trees. Doubtless more will be added when a thorough botanical survey is made. The park contains the largest and finest stand of red spruce in the United States. There are 202,000 acres of virgin forest. Much of the remainder, logged years ago before ruthless logging operations were the vogue, is now an attractive forest. The annual rainfall of 84 inches is exceeded only by that of one locality on the northwest coast. As the dense forest insures a gradual runoff, there can be no finer streams.

Many Trout Streams

There are approximately 600 miles of trout water in the park. Adequate stocking program will provide excellent fishing for all. The park is a paradise for wild life. Restocking and zealous protection will insure that all visitors will see the larger game animals such as deer, bears and elk.

"An evidence of the exquisite and unique charm of the Great Smokies is the fact that enthusiasts from other states have been so prominent in the successful efforts to establish the park. They have increased our profound respect for the beauty and charm of this area. In describing this area these enthusiasts have used such language as this: The most massive uplift anywhere in the East, 'A supreme masterpiece of nature's handiwork which should be preserved for all time to come in its original state.

"I promise you that it shall be the purpose of the state of North Carolina to cooperate in every way to make the Carolina entrance to the Great Smoky Mountains National Park as attractive as possible.

"I was talking the other day with Mr. E. B. Jeffres, the able and efficient chairman of the state highway commission. He is planning to pave the roads leading to the park entrances, and to make full preparations for the safe and comfortable travel of the park visitors.

"As you know, Mr. Jeffres is a native of Haywood County, and these plans are safe in his hands. He is as interested in the success of the park as you are.

Primarily Affected

"I need not remind you that Western North Carolina has primarily responsibility and the largest opportunity of reaping the returns from the investment in the Great Smoky Mountains National Park. It is not, of course, the only section of the state that will profit from the park. North Carolina will benefit from mountains to seacoast. And east Tennessee will profit almost as much as North Carolina.

It is of primary importance that this meeting set up plans whereby the maximum returns in the broadest sense will be obtained from this investment and will accrue from this unusual opportunity. It is fundamental that no shortsighted policy be adopted anywhere that will tend to decrease the great service this park is going to render the welfare of Western North Carolina. How to let the world know about the beauties, the charm, the appeal, the allure of this great region; how to advertise the attractive and delightful ways of entering this area through North Carolina; how to get North Carolina and this region in particular ready for the great change in this section which the park is going to bring about—these are our chief problems. This undertaking challenges the best, the broadest, the most unselfish concert of action. It requires the elimination of petty jealousies. Provincialism has no place in such a program. Every part of Western North Carolina will benefit from our making the Great Smoky Mountains National park a summertime playground for the tourists of America. Our purpose is to successfully sell the beauty and allure of the park to the nation and to establish the ideal of North Carolina as the gateway to this natural wonder.

Of Great Magnitude

"I doubt if the people of this State, I doubt if even the leaders of Western North Carolina, realize the magnitude of this undertaking or the stupendous opportunity which this park will bring to Western North Carolina. Officials of the national park service estimate the park will be drawing more than a million tourists annually. The entire population of North Carolina is three million people. Can you conceive of what it will mean to have one visitor for every three persons in North Carolina and to have all these visitors concentrated in the main in this part of the State? If the average expenditure per person should amount to $50, the annual harvest of the tourist crop would be more than $50,000,000. This would set the value of the tourists crop at twice the present value of our cotton crop and it would be gathered without the backbreaking toil of picking and it would not require the deduction of half its value to pay the fertilizer bill.

Warned to Prepare

"Park officials have warned North Carolina and Tennessee to prepare for the tourists. They point out that old industries will be stimulated and new ones created. For instance, it will soon be necessary to have 1,000 additional horses daily to satisfy the exploring demands of the visitors. This means new employment and new markets for feed-stuffs in the vicinity of the park. Other developments should be new hotels, boarding houses, filling stations, garages, additional markets for farm produce, expansion of mountain handicrafts, etc.

"We need only to realize that this park is within 24 hours of more than half the population of the United States, to comprehend its immense potentialities. It is within a three day drive of 80,000,000 people. Add to this the fact that it is a place of incomparable charm and attraction different from other national parks, that it is the most massive uplift anywhere in the East and you can appreciate the possibility of the staggering figure of more than one million visitors a year.

"Mr. Thorpe over there (referring to J. E. S. Thorpe of Bryson City, president of the Mellon-controlled Nantahala Power company) is planning to build a dam in these mountains that will have more cement in it than all the paved roads in North Carolina. With this industrial development, and the tourist business, the future of Western North Carolina is secure.

Needs Better Conception

"North Carolina, as a whole, must get a better conception of the value and drawing power of the park. The state must put its house in order. We must clean up public places and beautify the main routes leading to the park. It is estimated that at least one million residents of California visited that state first as tourists and either stayed or returned to take up their residence. I believe there is no other single factor that will be as potent in drawing and keeping future residents and future industries into North Carolina, as will the Great Smoky Mountains National park.

"We delight in citing the fact that North Carolina has one of the premier highway systems in the nation on which we have expended some $175,000,000. What better impression could be made on the tourists than to beautify these lanes of travel, particularly the trunk lines that lead to the park? Each of these should be made a continuous vista of natural flowering plants and stately trees.

"Such awe-inspiring areas as Grandfather Mountain, Linville falls and gorge, and many others would lead fittingly to the climax of the Great Smokies or would furnish complementary attractions to the main point of interest.
