Danger of Typhoid Largely Avoided By Inoculation

On Friday, October 16th, about every student in the Elementary school was inoculated for Typhoid Fever. This will keep us from taking Typhoid for at least two years. Typhoid germs are generally spread by flies and impure water. Do not allow flies to light on your lunch and do not leave any food scattered about that will attract flies. Do not put your mouth on the metal of the fountains when getting a drink of water. Germs can be spread this way also.

The Adventure of a Dime

I was once a part of a large piece of silver that lay deep under a mountain of Connecticut. One day some miners came and sunk a shaft deep into the heart of the mountain. The men came down into the ground and got me out and put me in a little car and brought me to the surface.

There I was put on a train and taken to Washington where I was made into a dime. Then I was sent to a bank with many other nickels, quarters and dimes.

There a man got me out and gave me to his little girl. The little girl bought a tablet and pencil with me. The merchant gave me to a little boy who had delivered some goods for him.

This little boy bought a bright colored rubber ball with me. Since then I have changed hands many times and have seen a lot of the world. I am becoming rather thin but children and grown folks seem to like me just the same.

Playground Swings Are Fun

Our playground equipment includes several swings, hung in a row. They are made of chains, with a board for a seat. It is great fun to stand in the seat and swing high in the breeze.

Neat Papers are Necessary

We should always hand in neat papers to our teachers. We must have clean hands and a sharp pencil in order to do this. We should always be very careful to leave the proper margin, make all of our letters and figures of uniform size; and never crowd, erase, nor mark out any of our work. This will make our papers look much better.

A Good Citizen in the Schoolroom

A good citizen does not waste his paper nor write in his books. He should always be careful to keep the floor clean. He should study his lesson, but not talk unless the teacher lets him. He should keep clean, brush his teeth, and comb his hair. A good citizen is kind to his teacher.

SECURITY

Our government has set up a system of protection which removes almost all danger of attack by highway thieves, protects our property from thieves, aids in putting out fires. To make progress possible, security must prevail. Perhaps you may ask why the government has to do this? Do not individuals know enough to have sufficient sense of justice to take all reasonable care to preserve their own lives and property and others. All of us ought to be able to say—"Yes."

What We Burn Up

We burn up homes and by this habit we waste $10,000,000.00, or more, in the United States every year. More than 15,000 people lose their lives by careless fires. We have a very extensive system of fire insurance and the policies are taken out by the American people.

The civilized countries of Europe have no such losses by fire, because when their houses burn down they don't have enough timber over there to build back a house as quick as we people who live in the United States.

Fire Fighting

There is a good reason, then, why the fire departments of the United States are the best in the world. They have to be! One who is heartless enough to forget the loss and suffering cause by a fire will be tempted to laugh when he reads the frantic but almost hopeless efforts to put out fires before the modern fire engine came into use.

Fire Preventions

Big fires still occur, for sometimes a blaze has gone so far before it is discovered that the best that can be done is to limit it to the building where it broke out. The proper way, after all, to fight fires is to see that they do not get started. This can be easily done by two ways: constructing buildings so as to make them fire proof and by urging people to be more careful and by showing how their carelessness may cause a fire. Most of the large cities now have "fire limits" within which they do not allow any large wooden buildings to be built. Theatres must have asbestos curtains to shut off the auditorium from the stage and the rest of the building. Automatic sprinklers are installed in many business places. Stairways and air shafts must be fire proof materials, so far as possible to protect the lives of the people in public buildings, the aisles must always be kept open; doors must open outward, and there must be plenty of fire escapes. Schools must have plenty of fire drills, so that every one in the building may get out in the quickest way.

Why We Must Have Policemen

One the stages and in the movies, we sometimes see an old man, probably with white whiskers, who wears a large silver star on his coat and this way rural constables are usually that kind of person, however, and probably no more criminals in proportion escape punishment in the country than in the city.

Policemen also render a great many courtesies. The driver of a car who has to stop because the policeman's sign tells him to do so may get angry; but after all the corner man or "traffic cop" is rendering the service that may save the lives and property of a great many citizens in the course of a year. He may help old ladies and little cripple children to get across a crowded street in safety. He stands in a busy corner when a school is being let out. Not all the people who do police work wear uniforms. In many large cities there are plain-clothes men who are detectives, who dress like ordinary men and they do their work more successfully because they cannot be recognized by the average person.

At the police stations there are policemen who keep records of persons whose history is bad. They keep quiet for a while if they try to do better and if they get worse they get them and sometimes lock them up in jail. Then, sometimes, have them tried or put out on bonds.
