A LIFE THAT HAS BEEN WELL WORTH WHILE.

In the passing of Mrs. Millie Henderson one is reminded most forcibly of the fact that there is no death for those who really live. She lived, labored and loved for nearly a full century, and leaves behind her an influence that shall never die. For full three-quarters of a century she moulded the life of this county, beginning, with her husband, establishment of a family whose influences today know no bounds.

What would Transylvania county be today had Mrs. Henderson never lived? We cannot imagine the county without the work and accomplishments of her fine sons and daughters, grandsons and granddaughters. Then, coming on are rising generations of her descendants to carry on the great Christian work and provide the needed leadership without which this community would suffer immeasurable loss.

It has been this writer's pleasure to speak at home-coming events at Quebec, and "Mother Henderson" would be carried into the church on her chair, borne by the strong arms of her splendid sons. We watched her face light with joy and gratitude as her sons, preachers and teachers, took part in the program. She was happy, indeed, and well might she be happy! It is not given to many mothers to watch the babes who had been nursed and nurtured at their breasts grow into such a state of clean manhood and womanhood of splendid usefulness as that which marks the Henderson family.

Transylvania county has been greatly enriched because Mrs. Millie Henderson lived here, and in like manner this county is grieved because she is gone.

LET ALL CITIZENS JOIN IN CLEAN-UP MOVEMENT.

Town officials have made splendid provisions for co-operating with the citizens in cleaning up the premises next week, to the end that the beautiful town will not be marred by unseemly sights. The summer season is right now upon us, and numerous streets loaded with people are passing through Brevard each day. Attraction will be added to the beauty and appeal of the place if all trash is removed and a thorough spring cleaning is observed.

The plan as outlined by Mr. Patton, town clerk, appears in detail on another page of this issue of The Brevard News, and it is to the interest of the town as a whole and to every citizen of the town that full and complete co-operation be given the town officials in this good work. The D. A. R. group has placed approval upon the plan, and it is expected that other organizations will take official action in support of the plan.

Let us tell you once more that the summer of 1932 is destined to be Brevard's greatest summer season—let's get ready for it.

DOES PROHIBITION PRODUCE DRUG ADDICTION?

(By Mrs. F. E. Jenkins)

I have recently re-read a volume from "Every Man's Library," that has long held a peculiar interest for me. Mr. E. W. Lane's book, "Modern Egyptians." This work was termed by the English critic, Stanley Poole, "The most perfect picture of a people's life that was ever written." To this tribute the editor of "Every Man's Library" adds one of his own, with this concluding paragraph: "Lane was able to acquire, not only the refinements of their (Egyptian) speech, and the minute details of their etiquette, but also a perfect insight into their habits and ways of thought."

In his chapter on Religion and Laws, Lane refers to the fact that wine and all intoxicating liquors are banned by the Egyptians, in common with natives of other Mohammedan countries. He further tells us that there are Moslems who do indulge in the forbidden drinks, but adds, "Among the Egyptians, there are few who indulge in this manner."

At the time Lane's book was written, drunkenness was punished in Egypt by flogging, the penalty decreed by the prophet, but we are told and addicted to this vice (i. e. use of intoxicating drugs) is certainly of nearly so great, in proportion to population, as is the relative number persons in our own country (England) who indulge in habitual drunkenness."

The Egypt of which Mr. Lane wrote nearly a century ago, is of course, not the Egypt of today. Egypt has changed, as greatly perhaps, as Turkey. The Egyptians may now be a race of drunkards, or drug addicts, or both, for all I know.

Nevertheless, it seems true that, until the country was brought under European influence, prohibition was a success in Egypt. And it did not reduce an enormous number of "depe fiends," which it is frequently alleged is the inevitable result of prohibition. I believe Mr. Ewbanks stated something to this effect in his recent speech here.

Mr. Lane was not advocating prohibition. He was not holding up the Egyptians as examples for Englishmen, any more than I should choose them as patterns for Americans. He was merely recording facts concerning Egyptians.

The statement that prohibition has never succeeded anywhere, is to my mind, not confirmed by the appeal to history. And thus the contention falls at that universal failure in the past demonstrates the impossibility of present or future enforcement.

While reading these studies of Turkish and Egyptian life, it interested me to contrast the Oriental attitude toward prohibition with that of Westerners.

Most Americans will agree with the Mohammedans that drunkenness is a vice productive of much misery, tremendous spiritual and economic waste.

Where the view point diverges. The Mohammedan reasons thus: Since alcohol is a habit forming drug, the danger of over indulgence is so great, we prefer to forego the enjoyment of its moderate use, rather than risk becoming excessive drinkers.

We, on the contrary, reason after this fashion: The pleasure of indulgence is so great, we prefer the risk of becoming excessive drinkers, to foregoing the enjoyment of moderate drinking.

Contact with western nations has wrought many changes among the Mohammedan peoples. Their views are altering on prohibition as well as on other matters. Travelers tell us that Mohammedans are rapidly discarding their scruples, and are more and more acquiring the pleasing fashion of getting drunk. We will leave to our anti-prohibitionists to point out to them all the advantages they will derive therefrom.

So much for the plea to abolish prohibition, "because it can not be enforced."

We all admit that in America it is not enforced. There are many who feel that considerable modification is necessary before enforcement is at all likely. But we require further proof that enforcement is impossible before we can vote for its entire abolition in that ground.

THE COUNTRY PREACHER

Editor Brevard News:

Dear Jim:

Will you allow space in your most valuable paper to say a few words in regard to our country preachers? As to our ability we feel very small indeed.

But when I began to read the precious words of My Master I find most of His life was spent in the plane by the seaside and on the mountain top.

The greatest sermons were not with the stiff necked ossified preachers, but his message was to poor people who didn't have bread to eat.

On the words of Jesus the most interesting metaphors seem to throw out forked lightning. He didn't talk like he had bunions on his tongue.

Some sermons instead of being a bugle call for service are spiritual showers of cocaine. Some people are obsessed with the idea of Churbanity.

Oh well you know they are a kind of religious snob. But just here as I stop to look I see the high class preachers will be bowing at your feet. But I thank our Great God we will have John the Baptist and some of the greatest men of earth with the lowly Nazarene in our company.

I think God for old time back wood calico religion that will make a man love all even to the greatest sinner.

The Little Country Preacher,
REV. W. P. HOLTZLAW.

JASPER A. HARTMAN

Jasper A. Hartman died at his home March 21, 1932, aged 66 years and three days. He was sick over five months with a complication of diseases. He suffered terribly but when the end came, went quietly to sleep.

He will be remembered in your county by his fellow-workers in the lumber woods, as Jap. He was a locomotive engineer, hard working and always did his work and more. Four years ago, he and wife came to Fla. and settled near Brooksville, where he was buried March 24.

Funeral was conducted in the home by Revs. Beasley and Senterfit of the Baptist church; burial in Lake Lindsey cemetery not far from the home. He leaves to mourn his loss one son, Otho, of New York City; one daughter, Mrs. Wilka Ettinger of New York City. His wife and little granddaughter, Bobby Frances Ettinger.

Earth's tomorrow holds for us no meeting place, yet in Heaven we hope to see you face to face dear Daddy.

His wife MRS. HARTMAN,
OTTO AND WILDA HARTMAN, Brooksville, Florida.

SERIES OF SERMONS ON THE ONE THING

Rev. J. H. West, pastor of the Brevard Methodist church delivered the first of a series of Sermons on "One Thing" Sunday evening at the regular hour for evening worship.

According to Mr. West this series of sermons will continue for four Sundays making a total of five. These discourses will be preached each Sunday evening successively in the following order: April 24 "One Thing Thou Lackest," being the words of Christ to the young lawyer, May 1; "One Thing I Know," the explanation of the blind man who was cured by a miracle of Christ to the Pharisees, May 8; "One Thing I Do" Paul telling of his plans for future work in the church, May 15; "One Thing Have I Desired of the Lord and that will I seek after," in the words of David.

The first of the series delivered Sunday evening was "One Thing is Needful," being the words of Christ to Mary. Mr. West portrayed this theme in an admirable manner and it is expected that a large number of people will attend his services each Sunday evening in order to follow the series.

HALL GRAY TO HAUL GREENVILLE MAIL

Hall Grey of Penrose, won the bid for the Greenville-Brevard Star route and will carry that mail beginning July 1st, 1932, according to Postmaster R. L. Nicholson.

Mr. Grey has been carrying the mail for Uncle Sam for a long number of years and he is widely known throughout the country. Mr. Grey received the route on a four year contract, his term expiring on June 30, 1936.

The mutual exchanges have been organized by Gaston County farmers in recent weeks. One will market poultry and be affiliated with the State exchange.

REGULAR MASONIC MEETING

FRIDAY NIGHT
7:30 O'CLOCK

at the D. A. R. Convention in Washington, D. C. this week.

PAY TRIBUTE TO MRS. LODEMA ROBERTSON

Miss Martha Harper, founder of the Harper Method of beauty culture with Mr. and Mrs. P. M. Brimmer, owners of the Asheville Harper Method Parlor and Mrs. Newman of Asheville were visiting in Brevard Monday as the guests of Mrs. Lodema Robertson.

Miss Harper came to Brevard to visit the Nobby Shoppe Beauty Parlor which employs the Harper method of beauty culture. Miss Harper founded her method over 42 years ago, when she had only one small shop in Rochester, N. Y. At the present time she has over 500 shops located in the United States, Canada and Europe. All of the operators of the Harper culture parlors are trained in the work under the personal supervision of Miss Harper, the originator.

Miss Harper claims that a patient desiring beauty treatment can obtain the same careful work, consideration and skill in the small towns where shops are located as well as in Paris, New York or London.

During their visit here Mrs. Lodema Robertson took the party for a sight seeing tour to many points of beauty and interest. The tour included a visit to Greenville, Caesar's Head and Mount Pisgah. During her visit here Miss Harper explained that throughout her travels which includes a large part of the globe she has never seen scenery to excel that of Western North Carolina.
