Yesterday I found a maple clothed in crimson dress,
An old cocoon, a robin's nest.
I heard two doves cooing of love
On a limb of the oak tree just above
My cottage. Oh, I love the little things
That tell of Spring...
The brook's low murmur, violets sweet,
Orchards budding, bees a-wing,
Cowslips blooming, vines that cling
To my cottage walls, Robins hopping in the grass,
Frogs a-croaking as I pass
The tiny stream a-down the hill...
The faint, sweet call of a whippoorwill.
The vibrant song of a meadow lark,
The rumbled bass of a dog's glad bark
As he scents his prey, I dream of gypsy trails and paterans,
Of campfires gleaming and caravans.
My soul soars upward... Angels sing.
"Winters is dead... To-day is Spring!"
