CONSOLIDATE MORE SCHOOLS IN STATE

Raleigh, June 2.—About 25 more small one and two teacher schools were consolidated by the State Board of Equalization during its two-day session last week, including most of those about which such controversies arose last year as to cause the board to abandon then the consolidation proposals. Around 400 additional teachers have been allotted to take care of the increase in average attendance of pupils reached during the past school year. While the board was able to save a little from the appropriations made for schools during the past year and will be able to carry over to next year a small amount of the school funds, next year's operations will have to be made with only a little more money than was spent last year, in spite of the increase in teachers.

Representatives from National Girl Scout headquarters are expected to visit the camp during the session.
