WOMEN WOULD DO WELL TO REMEMBER THEIR ENEMIES

Women who appreciate their privilege of voting, and who now are tempted to turn against the prohibition laws, would do well to remember that it was the whiskey interests that kept them away from the voting booth for at least forty years. The whiskey interests fought with might and main and to the very last ditch every attempt was made to obtain the right of franchise for the women of the United States.

Women led the fight to obtain prohibition, and women would do well to give serious thought to the suggestion before working for repeal of the prohibition laws.

Women, children and the home have been the real sufferers and paid the real price for America's "privilege" of having whiskey in the country, whether it was moonshine or legalized liquor.

Whiskey has never been friendly to women; whiskey dealers fought the women in their efforts to obtain the ballot; a liquor dealer's success depends upon the amount of the money that he can take out of the pockets of the bread-winners. Every cent of money that goes for whiskey and beer is just that much taken from the family.

Think well, women, before lining up with the liquor interests.

FURTHER EVIDENCE THAT THE WORLD IS COCK-EYED

Last week our good friend, R. E. Mackey, presented evidence to prove that just about everything in the world had gone crazy, crooked or deformed. His evidence was an egg, which was described in these columns, and which proved that even the hens had the fever of the age.

Well, to add "Exhibit B" to this evidence, Mr. H. Hedrick, Pisgah Forest merchant and farmer, presents a corn stalk to show that even this county's oldest and most reliable crop has caught the crooked disease, and has become so affected by the times that the corn no longer grows in straight stalks, but comes in a kind of twisted and turned state that is taken as an indication of the trend of the time.

Each joint in this cornstalk was crooked—something like an old rail fence, only crookeder than that, because even the zigzagging wasn't straight. One joint went east, another west, another north and another south, and then in between these points.

"Just like some men we know," was the explanation given the crooked cornstalk when it was placed upon exhibition.

"When hens stop laying regular and respectable eggs, and corn won't grow straight, there is something wrong with the world," another bystander remarked.

WHAT IS THE MATTER WITH THE COUNTRY?

This question has been asked, orally and mentally, millions upon millions of times during the past few years.

"What is the matter with everything here?"

One answer to that question can be found in the Winston-Salem affair that is now so much in the limelight. A 20-year-old boy's death, resulting from a gunshot at the end of a "party" given by him and his second wife, gives answer to the question of what is the matter with our country.

That boy, one of the heirs to the millions represented in the estate of the late R. J. Reynolds, was a living, and is now a dead, answer to the question.

Ask the tobacco farmers who toil from sun to sun and whose work is never done, who receive for their tobacco scarcely enough to pay fertilizer bills, and they will tell you the answer to the question as to what ails this country of ours. While these farmers toiled and slaved, trying to educate their children, trying to pay off the mortgage, trying to pay taxes to keep their homes from being sold, the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco company and similar organizations were building up estates for worthless sons like that boy who met violent death down at Winston-Salem.

Ask the workers in the tobacco factories, whose scant wages were barely sufficient to keep body and soul together, and they can tell you what is the matter with this country. They will tell you that the policy of the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco company, and similar organizations, keeping these workers going all the time on niggardly wages in order to create ONE big fortune in each one of these industries for the worthless children in those families to spend in revelry and riotous living, contributes largely to the deplorable conditions now existing in this country.

In other words, it is the segregation of wealth in the hands of a few, and widespread poverty for the masses, that has in large measure brought upon this country a period of stagnation and human suffering.

If the tobacco farmers were given a fair price for their tobacco, and the factory workers were given a fair wage for their labor, and the tobacco companies were content with a fair profit on their investment, then prosperity would be more general.

But in this land where the dollar mark is the only sign of aristocracy, where a few boys and girls live like the Reynolds boys have lived, while the countless thousands of boys and girls in the homes of the tobacco farmers and the factory workers go in want and without the actual necessities of life, there can be nothing but trouble.

So long as the sons and daughters of tobacco growers are handicapped because of lack of money, due to low prices on their crop, to prepare for life; so long as factory workers go on half rations due to low wages paid in tobacco factories, while the sons of the tobacco manufacturer can encircle the globe, marry and divorce one woman and give her a million dollars, and marry another woman, all before he is 20 years of age, then that long will there be trouble and more serious trouble.

The Reynolds affair has brought to light much that is wrong with this country.

LIPS THAT TOUCH WINE

(The Asheville Advocate)
Mr. Guy Galloway of Lake Toxaway, N. C., has revived the once widely acclaimed poem, entitled: "The Lips that Touch Liqueur Shall Ne'er Touch Mine," for re-publication in the Brevard News.

The poem is touching in its appeal, and compelling in its argument. The plot concerns a charming girl, wooed and betrothed to a fine young blade. The young lady however shows her sterling character by breaking off the engagement when her beloved fails to master the drinking habit. The poem reaches its moral in the last verse, to-wit:

"Oh, that every fair girl in our drink cursed land
Would say: 'I will never give my heart or hand Unto one whom I have every reason to think
Would touch one small drop of such poisonous drink.'
And reply when she's wooed: 'I'm a foe to the wine
And the lips that touch liqueur shall ne'er touch mine.'"

Who knows but that we will have a revival of the old-time classics: "Ten Nights in a Bar Room," and "The Clock in the Steeple Strikes One."

But for the present we are reminded of a paraphrase on the poem quoted above. After the saloons went out a campaign was waged against cigarette smoking, and many a state enacted laws prohibiting the sale of cigarettes to minors. The anti-cigarette-eters received a fine boost when a sweet young thing adopted as the guiding principle of her courting life: "The lips that touch the cigareet Shall never rest beneath my snoot."

JUDGE TOOK IT OUT IN TALK

(Statesville Landmark)
"I regret to say that a feeling seems to have grown up in some sections that elections can be stolen. This case should be made an example." It was the solicitor of the Raleigh judicial district, Mr. Little, talking in Wake Superior court, and one could guess from the remark that the State's prosecuting officer was somewhat disturbed to learn that there are some people who would attempt to steal elections.

More than a year ago an election for a bond issue was held in Raleigh. Fraud was alleged and two election officials were indicted on charges of counting a dozen persons as having voted who did not vote. The trial was put off from time to time and 13 months after the indictments were found the case was called. The defendants were allowed to plead guilty to a misdemeanor to avoid trial on charges that constituted a felony.

Four persons whose names appeared on the books as having cast ballots at the election testified they did not go to the polls nor authorize ballots to be cast in their names. The solicitor said he had evidence that names of other voters were written on the books as voting when they did not go to the polls. But since the cheating did not affect the result of the election the solicitor, although distressed, permitted the defendants to enter the misdemeanor plea.
Judge Cowper, presiding, also appeared to be righteously indignant. The Raleigh News and Observer says his honor "scored the acts of the defendants in no uncertain terms." "I am opposed to such conduct, not only as a court official but also personally." Judge Cowper exhorted the solicitor to "keep a close eye" on elections. He promised to charge all grand juries in their counties and urged Solicitor Little to ask judges holding courts in Wake to do likewise.

So far so good. One not in the know would imagine from the talk that the election violators would get the limit of the law, certainly a term in jail and maybe a stiff fine in addition. But the judge seems to have exhausted his indignation in talk, for the time anyway. He allowed the defendants to pay costs and give bond in the sum of $1,000 each to appear for sentence two years hence. Giving for the bond was no inconvenience to the former election officials. Why the delay in punishment? Don't ask us. His honor may have been afraid to trust himself at the time, lest in his indignation he impose cruel and unusual punishment. He expressed a desire to be on hand two years hence to impose the judgment. But if he is sufficient cooling time will have elapsed. It is the custom in deferring sentence, if the defendant has a care in the meantime, to let him go without a day at the final appearance. It is highly improbable that the defendants will worry during the two years about what is coming to them. They know how such things are. So do other folks.

If anybody is brought to trial on account of the informalities of the conduct of the recent primary in Surry county they will be fortunate if brought before Judge Cowper. He may be highly indignant if they are found guilty but if he takes two years to decide what he will do with them they will have no cause for alarm.

ABSENTEE LAW SHOULD GO

(Charlotte Observer)

If one may judge the editorial impressions found in North Carolina newspapers, sentiment is growing steadily stronger in favor of repeal of the absentee voters' law or at least its modification to limit its application strictly to those known to be temporarily absent on the day of the primary. This law which was enacted in war times for the benefit of tens of thousands of eligible and qualified voters who were absent in the service of the Nation, long ago served its day of usefulness and has become the instrument of more evil than good, through abuse on the part of over-zealous if not unscrupulous partisans. Regardless of what is done or not done with the State primary law, the Legislature of 1933 should either repeal the absentee ballot statute or revise it so as to eliminate the abuses which have brought it into disrepute.

Suffered Ten Years Then Found Sargon

Recommends It Because It Proved Worth in Her Case

"Sargon and Sargon Soft Mass Pills are the most wonderful medicine I have ever used. I say this because they have brought back my health after I had suffered for ten long years. My liver was torpid and my complexion sallow. My entire system was filled with poison. I was dreadfully nervous and was losing my strength and energy. Sargon ended my troubles as no other medicine has ever done. But the greatest blessing of all was the way the Sargon Soft Mass Pills relieved me from constipation from which I had suffered for so many years."—Mrs. Alexander Malcott, 1405 W. Honor Camps Last Week
Camp No. 391, Canton, 4 applications; Camp No. 891, Murphy, 5 applications.

Murphy and Hayesville
Camp No. 891 Murphy and Camp No. 805 Hayesville will have a joint picnic this week. It's to be an old fashioned barbecue down on the river bank. Sorry I cannot be with you sovereigns.

Canton News
Sovereign E. L. Aiken, Consul Commander of Canton Camp No. 391 had to move from Canton on account of ereign West has been elected to the his job with the Southern and Sov-office for the last half of 1932. Sovereign Aiken and all members of the Camp were sorry he had to resign and move back to Hickory. He was a live wire and a good officer.

Financial Secretaries
Why not get out that rate book and application blanks, fill up your fountain pen and write some applications for your camp? You know there is one to one hundred that should carry protection in the Woodmen of the World, and they are not in some other state or county but right around your camp. Try it and see how many will sign up at once.

Hold on To Yours
Many have dropped their life insurance during last 3 years. Some that dropped it have passed on leaving their loved ones penniless, others find their health impaired so they cannot again pass the medical examination required to get more. Better hold on to yours while you have it.

AUTO SALES OFF 1000 IN STATE DURING PAST YEAR

Raleigh, July 14.—New automobile sales still show a slight drop. The June sales reached 1430 automobiles as compared with 1459 the month before, and 284 trucks, as compared with 291 in May. In June of last year 2338 automobiles and 448 new trucks were sold. Ford sales last June were 672 and Chevrolets 489.
