LATE FALL GARDEN POSSIBLE FOR ALL

Carefully preparing the soil and using partially shaded seed beds will permit the gardener to have a supply of vegetables for the late fall garden.

"In starting plants which need to be transplanted, it is better to seed them in partially shaded seed beds rather than attempt to plant in the open field," recommends E. B. Morrow, extension horticulturist at State College. "A lattice work of small slats makes an excellent covering for such a bed but if slats are not available, fine brush or other material may be used. However, this covering should be placed high enough above the ground to permit free circulation of the air and to give room for watering and weeding. If the soil is dry when the seeding is made, water it thoroughly and then cover with old sacks to retain the moisture. Remove the sacks as soon as the seedlings begin to push through the earth."

Young plants grown in this way must be hardened, however, before they are exposed to the hot summer sun. This may be done by gradually moving the shade.

In planting garden seeds directly in rows, get the seed down in the moist earth. For instance, beans and corn need to be planted in rather deep furrows, Morrow says. Cover more deeply than when spring planting is done, especially with the large seeded crops.

Small seeded crops will require considerable attention when planted in the open field. This means a carefully pulverized seed bed and possibly boards or old sacks laid over the row. When boards are used, raise them as soon as the seedlings push through and place each end on a rock or brick. Harden to the sun gradually by removing the boards in the early morning and late afternoon for the first few days.

"I No Longer Have to Dose Myself With Harsh Purgatives"

"A friend of mine urged me to try Sargon and Sargon Soft Mass Pills. I will always bless the day I took this advice. I have taken five bottles and I am now enjoying the best health I have had in years. The Sargon Pills proved to be exactly what I needed for constipation, and this is the first time in six years I don't have to dose myself with purgatives. All my troubles with constipation and biliousness are now at an end. My skin has changed to a clear natural color. The Pills are different from any other laxative. I have ever used. They are not only pleasant to take but never upset me in the least."—Mrs. A. B. Treloax, 321 Lime Ave., Long Beach Calif

BUYING TRUCKS AND SELLING JOY CARS

Fewer Autos Owned By The Citizens, But More Trucks Are Being Purchased.

Raleigh, July 20.—North Carolina citizens owned 45 more motor trucks on July 1 than they did a year ago, and 6,036 more than three months ago, while automobiles decreased 34,981 from a year ago, but had increased 26,163 over three months ago, figures compiled in the office of L. S. Harris, head of the Motor Vehicle Bureau, show. These figures are secured by measuring a given number of registration cards in the office and computing with that as a measure the number of cards for each county. They are within a dozen of exact.

Motor vehicles of all kinds July 1 numbered 338,528, as compared with 308,339 three months ago and 373,274 a year ago. Automobiles July 1 numbered 234,051, and motor trucks numbered 54,477, as compared with 257,898 automobiles and 48,441 trucks three months ago, and 319,032 automobiles and 54,242 trucks a year ago. Motorcycles increased from 765 a year ago to 868 July 1.

The figures indicate an increase in trucks, although slight, in contrast to a continuing decrease in automobiles, indicating that family cars are becoming farm and delivery trucks during the depression period. A few counties show a slight increase in numbers of automobiles, but most show a drop, and more show an increase in trucks. The county average for the State is 234 automobiles and 54 trucks, as of July 1.

Guilford led in automobiles with 20,050, a drop of 2,010 from a year ago. Mecklenburg had 18,225, a drop of 2,525 in the year; Forsyth 14,160, or 2,240 less than a year ago; Wake 11,575, or 1,135 less, and Buncombe 10,735, or 1,615 less than a year ago. Mecklenburg led in trucks, 2,980, or 30 more than a year ago; Guilford had 2,850, or 195 more than a year ago; Forsyth 2,660, or 175 more, and Wake 1,900, or 175 less than a year ago.

Transylvania county citizens had 525 registered automobiles and 60 registered trucks July 1, as compared with 580 automobiles and 90 trucks a year ago, and 450 automobiles and 45 trucks April 1, three month ago, the records show.
