But are we not in danger of repressing the healthy development of a child's moral powers by thus demanding implicate submission to our will. BY NO MEANS. The true liberty of the will consists in our being master of it, and so our own masters. Train a child to master his will in giving it up to his parents command, and he acquires the mastery to use when he is free.

God forbid that we should fall into the error of thinking that the will of the child must be left free and the child decide for itself. Let us never forget that the will of the child is not free, that passion and prejudice, selfishness and ignorance seek to influence the child in the wrong direction. It is in our superior judgment and calmer deliberation and fuller experience that we as parents, are to decide for our children whose will has been entrusted to our care. Let us not think that we are in
