THE WICKED YOUNGER GENERATION.

There is so much talk about the wickedness of the younger generation that one is led sometimes, to wonder if things can possibly get much worse. They are getting beyond redemption, we are told and something must be done. Automobiles, theatres, dancing and many other similar vices are ruining our young people at an alarming rate.

But are the young people of this great enlightened age any worse morally or spiritually than were the young people who are their parents today, in an age past. We think not. It is claimed that there are more temptations to lead them astray than there were in the "gay nineties." It is true we have the automobile but it must be admitted that where "old Dobbin" always knew the way home and required no attention on the part of the driver, the automobile must have at least a little attention, if no more than one hand. You may travel further and at greater speed but what is there in that which might be termed as hurtful? If it were not for the automobile, the attractions would be brought into the community.

It is not a question of the youth of today being any worse than the youth of yesterday but merely that they are more outspoken, more open with the thing they do. What you see them do is about ALL they do. They are no worse than they appear and frank, open spirit is really commendable. It is what is in the heart that matters and the young people of yesterday who did no wrong because of fear, who did not yield to temptation because it was not presented to them; who went to church because they were forced to do so or because there was no other place to go, certainly are not to be praised above the youth of today who have far more tests of morality and spirituality than did their fathers and mothers. If they attend church and other religious services it is because they like to do so and they derive more benefit from it than would be possible if they were required to attend against their will. They attend the theatre but it must be remembered that there were no theatres in the days when father and mother were coming into young manhood and young womanhood. The dances of this age would have been as popular a century ago as they are today if they had been known.

Maybe we are right and maybe we are wrong. But one thing is certain; the older generation has been preaching and lecturing about the younger generation since the time of Cain and Abel and will continue to do so as long as there is a younger generation. Perhaps this serves a good purpose in that it does something toward holding each younger generation in check, which may be a good thing after all.

SOME HOPE FOR THE WINTER.

There is at least one class of people in the State of North Carolina who have nothing to worry about this winter, and that is the farmers. They may not have any money but they at least have something to eat, which is far more than many of our city dwellers can say. The following editorial in the Franklin Press shows what the farmers of the state have been doing in preparation for the coming winter:

"Most farmers in North Carolina will be able to eat this winter whether they have any money or not.
"This is because, as a result of a planned campaign by home demonstration club members, farm women filled 3,190,000 containers with food. At a conservative estimate, this canned food is worth $638,013.40.
"Every dollar of the cost of family living that comes from the garden or from the orchard is just one more dollar added to the family income, just one more dollar cash for other things besides food. Canning has become a bread and butter necessity in many homes.
"Moreover, a better knowledge of nutrition has taught housewives the body's needs for iron, phosphorus, lime, cellulose and vitamins. Home canning is the best means of providing these necessities.
"Home canning means more money to spend and better health. It isn't too late. Continue your canning program until you have enough for your family all winter."

DO YOUR OWN WORRYING

Conditions throughout the world are righting themselves. You say now that you knew they would but you do not stop to realize that it has been a lack of confidence on your part of every individual in the nation that has prevented this "come back" from being seen a long time ago.

People have been spending too much time worrying about conditions throughout the world, over which they had no control and not enough time in thrashing out their individual problems.

World problems are simply a mass of individual problems and for that reason is up to the individual to correct world problems by first correcting his own personal problems. Don't worry about England or France or Germany. They are capable of doing their own worrying. They will come out on top without your assistance. Try to figure out methods of retrieving what you have lost; of building up your own business; of restoring confidence within your own heart and spend more time talking of the good things the future has in store for you and telling people how you, as an individual are doing your bit to restore the country to normalcy by dealing intelligently with your problems.

Worry will accomplish nothing. Work will accomplish wonders.

Confidence will assure success. Lack of it will doom you to failure. The world is depending on you, not so much as a great national leader but as an individual unit in the vast machinery of industry for if you and your neighbor and your neighbor's neighbor will look after your own affairs the national and international problems will be made simpler by not being forced to work out your problems as well as their own.

CAN'T PAY BONDS, DEBTS, INTEREST, WITH HATE.

In talking with one of the outstanding leaders of Transylvania county recently, The Brevard News asked the gentleman what, in his opinion, would be the best way out for this county.

"Two things are necessary," the gentleman replied. "We must have some kind of a settlement with the bondholders of the county and town. It will be utterly impossible for us ever to pay the amount of the public indebtedness. We have nothing with which to pay it. Then, too, when all that money was borrowed things were different. Every man in the county has taken his losses, and it is up to the bondholders to take their losses," he said.

"Why do you think that we will be unable to meet these obligations?" the man was asked.

"Well, let's survey the matter. Twenty-five years ago this county was rich in natural resources. Our forests were untouched. At that time the assessed valuation of the entire county, with all of its natural resources, was just about one million dollars. Today, all of our natural resources are gone. With operations of our lumber companies and other industries, the forests have been cleared of the valuable natural wealth. Yet our assessed valuation of our property has been increased to $8,500,000. We owe, in county and town public debts, something like $3,000,000. Will you figure it out and tell me how in the name of common sense this debt can ever be paid, or how the property owners are ever to pay taxes on an assessed valuation of $8,500,000, when all of our natural resources have been removed?"

"Is there no way out for us?" was the next question put to the gentleman.
"Yes, there is a way out for us, and that brings up the second proposition. By working together, planning together, suffering together, sacrificing together, we can work out of it all. But that is a hard task here, for it will call for elimination of hatred, personal spite, petty jealousies and harmful enmities. We can never work out of our difficult position by fighting one another all the time. We must realize that the welfare of one is the concern of all. We must learn the lesson that no one man can prosper here until and unless others about him can prosper. We must further realize that hurting one man in the community is hurting all men of the community."
Return to the slow, but safe, pursuit of agriculture and stock raising was one way that this man indicated as an avenue of returning to the county's former fine position. As to the suggestion that bondholders should make adjustment of these obligations, that suggestions has been made by many citizens, and is becoming a live topic of conversation among the tax payers of the county and town.

THANKS TO THE OBSERVER OF STERCHI BROTHERS.

Over in Asheville there is a business house known far and wide as Sterchi Bros. Stores, dealers in furniture. The primary object of this concern is, of course, to sell furniture. But Sterchi does not stop with the mere selling of merchandise. Like all wide-awake business concerns, Sterchi knows the value, even to his big business, of making contact with the surrounding country; of devoting time and money to the upbuilding of Asheville and Western North Carolina; of passing out a bouquet every now and then to make their neighbors happy and feel that life is worth living and that all earnest efforts have their fruition of reward.

Sterchi Brothers puts on a radio program every Thursday morning from 9:30 to 9:45 o'clock. It is an enjoyable program, as all those who listen in on the Sterchi quarter-hour know. Last Thursday morning's program was especially pleasing to The Brevard News, naturally, because Sterchi's Observer saw fit to comment upon an editorial appearing in this newspaper two weeks ago. We are taking the liberty of herewith publishing the comments made by Sterchi's Observer about our editorial, frankly admitting our pleasure in it, and in this manner express our appreciation to Sterchi Brothers for the comment, which was as follows:

"Sterchi's Observer notes a most interesting editorial in the September 1st issue of Jim Barrett's paper, The Brevard News, and since Sterchi Brothers have a primary interest in anything pertaining to the home, the observer wishes to commend that editorial to your attention, also to congratulate the folks over in Transylvania County who participated so successfully in Home Coming Day at the Rocky Hill Baptist Church. Readers of the Brevard News now have a new idea of the value of home-comings after reading the editorial headed "Why Do We Have Family Reunions and Homecomings"—its worth reading."

WHY TOWNS DO NOT GROW

A town is no bigger than people who compose it. If they are prudish, narrow-minded and are not progressive the town will always be small and behind the times in everything. It is not necessary to resort to lawlessness—to dispense with proper government to make a "live" town. But it is necessary that the laws and ordinances governing the town be in keeping with the times and that the people, as a whole, keep step with the times.

There is brought to our attention through the newspapers every day, instances of towns reviving laws which were made to govern a people who never knew anything about automobiles, telephones, radios or any other of our more modern conveniences. There is the case of a town in New England reviving the old methods of punishing violators of the law by placing them in stocks; forbidding the selling of even the necessities of life—medicines and food stuffs on Sunday; and using every conceivable method known to DRIVE people to church. The revival of laws of this kind can and will serve only one purpose and that is to drive really progressive inhabitants away from the town and offer no incentive for new residents and tourists.

Laws designed to protect are good laws and should be rigidly enforced. But why have a five or ten-mile speed limit when the average automobile can not run at this speed except in second gear? Why force business houses to close at dark or at any given hour, especially those which serve travelers who are passing through the town and tourists who come to the town for their "play-time"? It is hard to believe but there are towns, especially in the New England states who are reviving some of these old age-worn ordinances. But laws which were good in the by-gone days of hoop-skirts and bustles will not meet with the approval of this modern age of progress and achievement.

BUSINESS IMPROVING

(Rutherford County News)

That business is improving all must admit, who study conditions and trends of the times. Textile mills are receiving more orders, cotton is advancing in price and that means an advance in other farm products. The price on cotton governs many other commodities. Now is a good time to "buy." Prices are sure to increase with the advance of cotton.

Unemployment is decreasing everywhere while building is improving. If folks will work more, spend less and pay their honest debts, go to Sunday school and church more and serve their Master, business is sure to improve rapidly.
Rutherford County has more "new comers" now than she has had in many years. Houses for rent are scarcer now than they have been in several years.

IF YOU USE RED CLAY FOR THE BRICK, YOUR BUILDING WILL ALWAYS BE RED

(Greenville News)

Have you wondered why some men seem feminine and some women masculine?

Perhaps you will find the answer in "genes," minute divisions of life discovered by Dr. Thomas Hunt Morgan, the great biologist who learns and teaches at Cal Tech, Mecca of modern scientists.

Here is the story of genes, told briefly in words a layman can understand.

All life, as you know, develops by the multiplication of cells.

When the male and female reproductive cells unite the resulting embryo is a microscopic particle so small that it could be lost on the point of a needle.

Yet within this cell are many minute rods-called chromosomes. And the reproductive cell of each species contains a certain number of chromosomes that never varies—wheat 42, monkey 54, man 48.

Half of these are furnished by the male, half by the female, and each cell contains a complete set arranged in pairs.

Each pair of chromosomes, male and female lying side by side, is destined to become a certain part of the mature creature. One pair provides the element that becomes eyes, another perhaps, the respiratory system or the brain or sex equipment. Each of the 24 pair in the human cell contains some particular formation or quality inherited from the parent stock.

But this is not the end of wonders. These minute rod-like chromosomes are not indivisible units. Each is divided into sections called "genes." And as the chromosomes lie side by side, a gene of one may exchange places with a like gene of the other. For example, when the two chromosomes lie together, the gene that determines the color of hair in the male chromosome is exactly opposite the gene that determines the color of hair in the female chromosome, and the two may change places.

The result is an oddity. The male chromosome contains a female part; the female chromosome contains a male part.

This "crossing over" of genes explains the exceptions to Mendel's law of heredity. It may also explain why an individual apparently female is predominantly male.

Does a woman equal or surpass men in activities usually masculine? Observe her closely. Has she the figure, face and adventurous spirit of a man? However charmingly feminine she may be in some particulars, in others she may be more man than woman.
The plum tree must bear peaches if a peach limb is grafted on its trunk.

BOUND TO COME

(Mooresville Enterprise)

The auto makers figure that a certain number of cars wear out completely every year and have to be replaced. They look ahead to that much business they are sure to get. Now the farm equipment people are doing the same thing. In a survey made in the state of Ohio it has been found that farmers will have to buy twice as much machinery in the next five years as they bought in 1931 or they will not be able to plant and harvest normal crops. That same ratio of necessary replacement of farm machinery will possibly hold good around Mooresville. For several years farm profits have not been sufficient to warrant machinery and implement replacements. This means farming is now being done under more or less difficulty. Now, with crops considerably reduced, the process promises to be sufficient to warrant at least some of these replacements, and the machinery and implement industry is said to be showing considerable activity. All of which means that in still another way the farm is leading the country back to prosperity.

SCHOOL HINTS TO PARENTS

With the opening of public schools almost at hand, the News and Observer suggests that when the teachers begin their business of filling young heads with knowledge, parents should see that the young bodies are in the best possible shape for the winter's work.

"Dr. Shirley W. Wynne, health commissioner of New York City, has published a list of 'getting ready for school' hints. They apply equally well in North Carolina as in New York. The principal hints are:
"Every child should be examined by the family doctor.
"He must be vaccinated against smallpox.
"He should be immunized against diphtheria.
"His teeth should be in good condition.
"His feet should be fitted with proper shoes.
"His clothing should fit comfortably.
"His diet should include plenty of milk.
"His luncheon should be nourishing."
"For some families this fall some of those hints will run into economic difficulties. Every effort should be made to help these children afflicted by depression. But the hints apply, too, to the children of the well to do.

"More and more in North Carolina as in New York the greater part of the responsibility for the well being of children is being placed upon the schools. Many think that the apparent tendency to shape the child in the school rather than the home is an unfortunate modern departure. Certainly the duty must remain upon the parents to present their children at the schools in the best possible physical condition in order that the child may be able to make the most of the advantages and opportunities provided by the schools."—High Point Enterprise.

FORCED LANDINGS

Racketeering in Chicago is rapidly gaining headway as a real good business.

Some time ago a man got killed by a dead horse. While carrying the horse to grave a man was sitting on the back of wagon when the rope that bound the legs together came loose and with a bang, kicked the man and they had to have two burials, too bad.

Chicago is a great city to be from, but not to be in when they have a "gang war."

Hard and seen people in every walk of life who talk about others when they are not present, but have never heard them make such statements when the party was face to face.

If automobiles could talk and tell about things that go in them as they glide around during the night hours it would be real publicity.

Monday, September 5, was Labor Day and the Brevard News staff did not get a break and therefore had to live up to the name.

Cecil Brantley, who is from Atlanta, was recently accused of being from Chicago by some lady of Brevard. The Brevard News hopes that Mr. Brantley does not look like a "racketeer" to the community.

It is said by a lot of people that the younger generation is going to the dogs, but if you will glance back in your Bible and read about old Solomon and a few other characters you will find that the world is on an upward trend.

Rudy Vallee and his wife seem to be growling about a divorce—We thank our lucky stars that he does not have a twin brother like himself, do there would be double the racket that we are now getting through the papers and the radio.

It is said to relate that Mark Orr, former member of the Brevard News staff had to leave us and go to school. He dropped me a line recently and advised me as a "pal", to tell Mary Louise Croushorn hello for him.—I just wonder what the rest of the girls will say by him not sending them a hello.

Archie Kellar, my room-mate, is another hustler with the women, but somehow he has been stuck on Louise Simpson here lately. Archie rushes to the house at lunch every day and like he is going to make a flying tackle, goes back up town to meet Louise. I just wonder what Archie would do if "Doc" Long cut his lunch period short.

The mighty Babe Ruth, who has a red throughout baseball history was getting $80,000 per year until the depression made its debut, and the last contract called for $70,000 per year—This is going to be hard on my old pal, Babe, and I guess I will have to pass around the hat and take up a collection as he will not be able to get along without that extra $10,000. He being a charitable object, please donate freely to this good cause.

Once there were two negro men who made a journey, one to Hell and the other to Heaven. During the separation of a few years they happened to meet back on earth and started discussing the difference in the two places. The one that went to Hell stated that they did not have to do any work and slept as late as they wanted every morning and then get up and pitch a little coal on the fire, proceed playing poker all day with any kind of refreshments that they wanted. The one going to Heaven said it was quite different up there because they had to get up every morning at daylight, take in the stars and the moon and hang out the sun and upon all that, had to row the clouds all day long.
