ing comedy—the good, clean kind that is really appealing and funny and which will be thoroughly enjoyed by every one.

Hon. Ralph Ramsey is to deliver an address of welcome and the Fire Chief, Jim Bromfield, will speak a few words in behalf of the Fire Department. The musicians from the Brevard Baptist church will play special selections and a quartet from the colored Baptist church will offer special selections. There is also a woman's chorus of eight young ladies.

Every one is urged to see this minstrel and the promise is made that it is to be one of the best ever staged in this section.

LIVING AT HOME IN WESTERN COUNTIES

Crops reports from virtually all North Carolina counties, showing more acres devoted to food production, indicates farmers have caught the vision, in what they are learning to live at home. Faced with the necessity of having to produce a money crop to pay taxes and to buy things that cannot be produced on the farms, few farmers have quit growing cotton and tobacco, entirely. But most of them have materially cut cotton and tobacco acreage. It means much, of course, to the farmers and to the state as a whole that cotton and tobacco prices are a little higher this year. But the few planters who have devoted all of their time and energies to either or both of these money crops will surely come out at the little end of the horn, as usual.

The farmer who has produced food crops and who has some even though it be small amount of cash coming in from poultry, cattle, cotton or tobacco, is the one who is most fortunate—Greensboro Record.

RELIEF PROBLEMS COMMAND ATTENTION OF THREE RED CROSS CONFERENCES

Washington, D. C., Oct. 12—"The Red Cross in the Present Emergency" is announced as the general theme of regional conferences of chapter workers to be held in Asheville, October 18; Greensboro, October 19, and Goldsboro, October 21, under the auspices of the American Red Cross.

From national headquarters will come Maurice R. Reddy, assistant director of disaster relief, and H. J. Hughes, legal adviser, to make addresses at all three conferences and to lead discussions on roll call and emergency relief matters.

Among the topics which will hold the interest of delegates are flour and cotton distribution, health activities, development of local leadership, Junior Red Cross, preparations for the needs of winter, and the approaching membership campaign. Each conference will be divided into morning, luncheon and afternoon sessions, with the chairman of the host chapter presiding at the noonday meetings.

Local arrangements are in charge of J. G. Deshler, Secretary, Buncombe County chapter, Asheville; A. A. Perkins, chairman, regional conference attendance committee, Greensboro, and Mrs. L. D. Giddens, executive secretary, and Rabbi Iser L. Freund, chairman, Wayne County chapter, Goldsboro.

been in office. He explained that the Democrats favor a low tariff in order to encourage foreign trade, since, he pointed out, a high tariff will drive industries from this country, since other nations will resent the raising of the tariff walls and will refuse to do business with this nation.

Going into the question of the proposed repeal or modification of the eighteenth amendment he believes that prohibition has been a failure and that something must be done about it.

In reviewing the progress of the party since it went into office following the Wilson administration he says that conditions have been getting worse during the three terms of the Republican administration.

He was high in his praise of some of the Democratic candidates, especially of Robert R. Reynolds, candidate for the United States senate, whom he says he has known for many years.

In closing he urged that all Democrats vote a straight Democratic ticket since any effort to eliminate any one of the party might result in confusion to the extent of indicating a choice not intended. Better to vote a straight ticket, he said.

Mr. Cocke has that rare faculty of injecting wit and humor into his speeches relieving them of dry technicalities.

Judge Sam Cathey, also of Asheville, followed with a review of the administrations and what they have accomplished or failed to accomplish. He made a strong appeal for the Democrats of this section to vote a straight ticket and especially appealed to the Young Democrats. He is very much interested in the part the Young Democrats will play, at this time and in the future. He is president of the Young Democrats club in Asheville. Judge Cathey is well known throughout this section and his address was most interesting.

FASHION ARTICLE

COSSACKS

The Cossacks are coming. Paris and New York collections are in thorough accord on that point. Cossack hats, cossack coats and the cossack influence in dresses is felt all along the line. The square shouldered coat worn with a little straight sided hat, frequently of Persian lamb, is extremely smart for the autumn. Horizontal bands of braid across the chest of coat or jacket are in the best traditions of the dwellers by the River Don. The waist is neatly fitted at the natural line and the skirt swings into an easy flare. Schiaparelli showed a brown wool, cossack bonnet with her sports outfit, number 431. This is a striped brown and yellow dress of wool, very straight and simple with a ruffled vest, knitted in dark brown with gold fasteners.

Another Schiaparelli sports outfit which has had a decided success is her number 423. This has the advantage of being well adapted either to town or country wear. It consists of a blouse, separate skirt and jacket, the latter of russet brown tweed, strictly tailored with pockets at the sides and a fastening of laces run through a gold plaque. The striped skirt is in beige and brown tweed, cut high on either side at the front. Pastel blue is an amusing color note in the scheme and is introduced in the "Jerserelli" blouse which ties in a loose bow under the chin.

Fur Trimmings

Fur is everywhere this season. Not only is it used for separate wraps scarfs and many intricate muffs of all sizes, but also as trimming for day and evening costumes. For instance, Worth's "Casino de Paris" is an attractive evening gown which is decorated with mink. It is crepe velvet in tobacco brown, cut to follow the lines of the body. The bodice, slightly draped and shirred at one side, marks a rather high waistline. The décolletage, high in front, is cut low under the arms and in the back, outlined with a narrow band of the fur. A waist length packet has sleeves, which are wide and shirred and a collar of velvet flower petals and it ties in the back. Numerous American dresses also employ fur bandings as part of the design of the evening dress. Sometimes it is even used for the entire bodice. Mink and lynx are the most popular pelts.

Little capes are occasionally tied on with ribbons which catch on fur tails. These fur trimmings on the neck are quite amusing and looking. Fur belts, short fur jackets, fur scarfs and fur trimmed hats are important in the present fashion picture. And furs are so reasonable and so beautiful this year that so many women will avail themselves of their great popularity. Note that the most costly furs, formerly reserved for combination with silks, velvets and the other silken materials, are now commonly shown in fine wools. You will see ermine broadcloth use together for evening wraps. Great luscious foxes lead cloth coats for evening and are seen on lovely wool coats for daytime or the night. This is a year of untraditional and novel ideas.

Deaver.

HOBO ARMY GROWING AT ALARMING RATE

Two Hundred Thousand Boys
in Their Teens Roaming
Over The Country

Two hundred thousand boys in their teens' jobless yet not always in search of work, are roaming the United States today, stealing rides on freight trains, panhandling, and living in hobo jungles. Like a gigantic tide they are pushing toward the South, where in warmer states they expect to spend the winter and hopefully wait for the depression to end.

This is the discovery of the children's bureau of the federal Department of Labor in a national survey which has just been completed.

Officials feel, incidentally, that there is no immediate danger that these youths will become a social menace, but it is admitted that there are perils ahead unless they can be returned to their homes and either put into schools or given employment.

Railroad officials report to the bureau that these so-called "white collar bums" have virtually put the professional hobo out of business. These same officials say that the problem has gone beyond their control, adding: "The policy is to remove transients from trains, but the last year we have been unable to do so because the numbers are so large."

In El Paso, Tex., police officials report that during the last six months more than 45,000 transients passed through the city. Kansas City, Mo., reports an average of 1,500 a day.

Many pitiful stories have been told investigators for the children's bureau. One report reads, in part, as follows:

"We next encountered two men making coffee. One was 18. He was from Mt. Carmel, Pa. He gave me a letter to read from his sister and mother. The sister wrote a good letter, telling about high school. The mother was a poor speller. She said the father was out of work and that the sister would quit school and go to work if she could find anything. She urged the boy not to return home."

"He was eating a loaf of bread, tearing out pieces of it and washing it down with coffee. His nose was swollen where he had been hit by a railroad brakeman while he was riding a freight train."

"Some of the boys," says another report, "say they are going to certain cities. Most of them are not going anywhere but have to keep on the move. Police cannot arrest them, for the jails won't hold them."

Railroad detectives can spot the "nomad" instantly by the awkward way in which he swings aboard a train. Recently a report was received about a boy who, inexperienced like thousands of others, fell and was fatally injured by a train. Welfare officials who notified his parents in a distant city received this reply:

"Please see that he is buried. We got no money."

THE NORTH CAROLINA HILLS

Oh, the North Carolina hills,
How majestic and how grand,
With their summits bathed in glory
Like our Prince Emmanuel's land
Is it any wonder then
That my heart with rapture thrills,
As I stand once more with the McCalls
Upon those North Carolina hills.

Chorus
Oh, the hills, beautiful hills,
How I love those North Carolina hills,
If o'er sea or land I roam,
Still I'll think of happy home,
And the McCalls among these North Carolina hills.

II
Oh, the North Carolina hills,
Where my boyhood hours were passed
Where I often wandered lonely
And the future tried to cast
Many are our visions bright,
Which the future ne'er fulfills,
But how sunny were my day dreams
With the McCalls among the hills.
Ch.—Oh, the hills, etc.

III
Oh, the North Carolina hills,
How unchanged they seem to stand,
With their summits pointed skywards
To the Great Almighty Lord,
Which my heart with sadness fills
Many changes I can see,
But no changes can be noticed
With the McCalls among the hills.
Ch.—Oh, the hills, etc.

IV
Oh, ye North Carolina hills,
I must bid you now adieu;
In my home beyond the mountains,
I shall ever dream of you,
In the evening time of life
If my Father only wills,
I shall still behold the visions
Of the McCalls among the hills.
Ch.—Oh, the hills, etc.

J. N. OKR.

DID THE POLICEMAN SHOOT?

A man went into a Jew clothing store and tried on a coat and vest. While the Jew turned his back to get the pants the man ran out of the store. A policeman came and pulled his pistol. The Jew called out excitedly: "Shoot him in the pants. The coat and vest belongs to me."

McKINNA REUNION HELD AT BOYLSTON

On Sunday, October 2, a reunion of the "John McKinna" descendants was held at the Boilston Baptist church. The service began at 10 a. m. with Rev. A. O. Allison from Kentucky to preach at 11 a. m. Then adjournment for one hour for dinner, which was served on the ground.

At the afternoon service Rev. H. A. Newton, of Pickens, S. C., delivered an excellent sermon. There were short talks by numbers of the McKinna clan also a brief history of the ancestors was read. There being the fifth generation represented at this reunion, 47 of whom yet bore the name "McKinna."

The next reunion will be held at the home of Mrs. Rebecca Hollingsworth, Pisgah Forest, on the first Sunday in October, 1933.

AUTUMN

Up to the autumn hills we lift our eyes,
Where nature-painted leaves are showing clear

With glowing colors, matched by morning skies,
And all the beautiful blossoms of the year.

What is the message that the autumn brings,
As downward falls the sear and yellow leaf,

And slowly to our mother earth it wings?
"The love that gives the color grants the sheaf."

The leaves will fall, but safe on every branch,
The baby leaves are packed in cosy down;

Though cold winds blow and freezing weather launch
Its storms, the little buds are safe and warm.

This is God's promise at the fall of year
When earth soon sleepeth near a mantle white;

"After the winter spring-time will appear
And all things living be gladdened by the sight."

Heed then the message ye who toil and pray
So steadfast through this dull depression time:
God is not mocked, but, faithful every day,
Behind the clouds His sun doth brightly shine.

He has some purpose in this seeming ire
Although we cannot tell why we are tried;
"It is the gold that stands the heat of fire
That comes forth shining, strong and purified."

MAN TO LIVE AGAIN IS SERMON SUBJECT

other. From the time of the first death to the present time, the question has been asked, "If a man die shall he live again?"

Continuing along this line he said that scientists, who for years had fairly hooted at the idea of life after death are becoming convinced of the possibilities. They are beginning to believe that when a man dies it is not the end of him for all time; that there is something beyond the grave.

Even savages, who have never known Christianity, show that they have within them some instinct which tells them that this is not the end. There is one race known to kill the wife and children of the man who dies and buries them with him that all may be together in the life beyond. And there is this same instinct in civilized man which makes him feel that this life is not all.

Rev. Hartsell showed how that for a God to permit man to live on—always progressing, always forging ahead, never realizing on this earth, the ideals that are within him and which cry for expression, would not be in accordance with great love and the justice and omnipotence he has told us he possesses. In illustration of this point he showed how that the famous painters had never been able to achieve the great successes of which they dreamed; had never been able to put onto canvass the beautiful things of which they dreamed nor have the world's great musicians ever been able to express in their compositions the things that are in their souls.

And all these achievements for which men strive, he believes will be realized in another life. The minister who spends years of labor in trying to tell the people of his congregation the things that he would like to tell them and who would live before them the perfect life which is his ideal but who cannot because of the temptations and trials and tribulations he must encounter on every side, will, he believes, in another life, realize this dream of achievement. And the painter will be able to paint the pictures he would like to paint while the musician will find no difficulty in putting into music the beautiful strains that have been in his soul.

In short, the ultimate glory of which man has dreamed; the highest ideals of life which have been but a dream, a longing here; the attainment of successes denied here will all be realized in another world. Hope, ideals, achievement, everything that spurs man onward would be for naught if he did not have within the hope of something beyond the grave.
